ARCTIC CRASH SUIT

EDMONTON (CP) — A statement of claim for general damages was filed in Alberta Supreme Court Thursday against an Edmonton airline and Marten Hartwell, pilot and lone survivor of a controversial Arctic plane crash.

The statement was filed by the estate of British nurse Judy Hill, one of the passengers killed in the crash of a twin-engine Beechcraft 18 piloted by Hartwell. It lists 12 examples of alleged negligence against Gateway Aviation, Hartwell's employer, and the pilot.

The statement alleges the crash would not have occurred if the defendants had exercised proper care in the maintenance, operation and navigation of the aircraft.

Edmonton lawyer Philip Ketchum, solicitor for the nurse's estate, said the claim is for loss of expectation of life and amenities of life.

The Toronto Sun and CHQT Edmonton said in a copyright story that Toronto lawyer Jim Karswick has been instructed by the Eskimo Brotherhood to "proceed with action in a court of the Northwest Territories for compensation for the lives of Mrs. Neemee Nulliayok and David Kootook . . ." who also died.

Tentative Accord In Fishing Strike

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Tentative agreement was reached at noon today on new salmon prices for 3,500 union fishermen on the British Columbia coast.

Negotiations were continuing early this afternoon between the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Fisheries Association of B.C. over 3,000 shoreworkers and 500 tendermen and both sides were reported very close to a tentative contract settlement for these two groups.

Hope was being expressed that fishing could resume on the weekend.

First word of a break in the week-long industry strike came from Ken Campbell, manager of the fisheries association, the bargaining agency for 14 companies.

He said the UFAWU fishermen will be voting on the latest salmon price offer and he said the union is recommending acceptance.

"We made some adjustments on pinks and chums and the welfare plan," he said.

Sockeye and coho price offers remained the same as before, he added. This was 50 cents a pound this year for sockeye and 52 cents next year (the union was asking 52 cents and 57 cents) and 40 cents and 42 cents for Coho, where the union was seeking 47 and 51 cents.

"We're hopeful that we can get it all settled and fishing can resume Sunday night, said Campbell.

Both sides had bargained late into Thursday evening and then again this morning in Vancouver following a 58 per cent rejection by fishermen of the last salmon price offer, which had been described as final by the association.

In the shoreworkers dispute, it was understood that the issue of the flexible weekend had been settled and that the association had offered a further 10 cents an hour to the $1.10 offer made earlier, which was rejected by union members.

The UFAWU, in an early afternoon statement, confirmed it is recommending acceptance of the fishermen's tentative agreement. It said the new gains over the association's last position are not major ones but it did not believe "it could extract any more."

However, the union said even if fishermen accept the proposed agreement, no agreements will be signed and the strike will remain in effect until the storeworkers and tendermen's strikes are settled. Members were advised to hold all boats in port until an announcement by the central strike and policy committee.

In addition, the union said no travelling time towards fishing grounds will be allowed until all three strikes are settled, at which time there will be 24 hours allowed to travel before any salmon net fishing begins.

Fishermen members are to vote not later than 9:30 p.m. Saturday and report to union headquarters the results of the vote not later than 11 p.m. Saturday.

The latest proposal includes an extra cent per pound beyond the last offer on pinks in 1974 and half a cent on chums caught in most areas in 1973 and 1974 and some improvements in the salmon welfare fund and workmen's compensation.

Young Have Faith In Future

By JACK SCOTT, Times Staff
(Last of a Series)

TOKYO — I'd shared a concern for the future of Japan with most of the leading Japanese I'd interviewed, but the dinner with the students, two days before my departure for home, changed all that.

I'd asked my guide to invite two or three graduating students from any of the 85 universities in Tokyo. With typical Japanese over-efficiency, he brought along seven. It didn't matter. It only made me surer that the future of Japan is not nearly as bleak as their more apprehensive elders would have you believe.

My notes hardly matter, either, except possibly for the remark of one of the three pretty girls in the party who told me very firmly, "No, sir, we're not losing our identity. We are living more like you westerners every day because that's the better way to live. But we are thinking more like Japanese every day because, for us, that's the better way to think."

I found them conservative, confident, even a little cocky in a cool sort of way.

All seven of them, it turned out, were being wooed by major companies who seek the brightest young people as executive potential. In labor-short Japan some firms recruit promising youngsters by offering them trips abroad and training courses at seaside resorts that include Zen meditation, conversational English, the writing of Haiku and instruction in the tea ceremony.

"Render service to your country and your society," one company urges in a brochure for students. "Manufacture glass!"

Katsuji Kawamata, the old lion president of the Nissan Motor Co., perhaps using a western adviser's phrase, had said earlier, "We do everything but the proverbial soft shoe to attract and keep good minds."

Except that they excelled in English, my dinner guests were not hand-picked for their views. They're typical of the 1,750,000 students in 900 Japanese universities who are getting a higher education. Fewer than two per cent are activists in any way, though it might seem a larger number to the guards at the U.S. embassy in downtown Tokyo. Marijuana smokers or —heaven forbid!—users of hard drugs are all but unknown. The long-haired hippie type is so rare that the Japanese haven't yet invented a word for them. There is such a close family feeling that few young men or women leave home until they're married.

These students, like most of the other three-and-a-half million in the educational pipeline, will invest in a briefcase or cover-alls the moment their schooling is finished to go directly into a business or a factory where, chances are, they'll remain for life. They have absolute faith in their future.

While the pundits in the mass-circulation dailies retail doom and gloom over the political future my guests readily admitted only apathy and indifference. They seemed interested solely in taking their place in a stable, affluent and expanding economy. In a society where a baby is born every 16 seconds (and an adult dies every 46 seconds) they represent a new generation that has no fears about what lies ahead.

It's hard to fault them for their boredom with politics. What passes here for a "political crisis" is, it turns out, largely a matter of the lead-

Campora Steps Aside

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Hector Campora resigned today to allow new Argentine elections that appeared certain to return to power Juan Peron, ousted by a military coup in 1955.

In a nationally broadcast speech, Campora said:

I have always had very" clear in my conscience the conviction that my election was for no other reason than to restore to Gen. Peron the mandate that was taken from him unjustly."

Campora and Vice-President Vicente Solano Lima signed their resignations in the Pink House, the official palace. Both houses of Congress were to approve them later today.

The dramatic move followed a sudden call from moderate union leaders that Peron resume his long-interrupted leadership. He returned from exile June 20 after Campora, his hand-picked stand-in, won elections from which Peron was disqualified.

Argentina was calm today despite bitter opposition from some leftist factions of Peronism who felt the sequence of events would bring more conservative government and weaken their stance.

Elections were expected to follow in 40 days, open to all parties but almost certain to be won by a coalition ticket of Peron and Ricardo Balbin, 68-year-old leader of Argentina's second-largest party, the Radical Civic Union.

Balbin, 68, was jailed for a year during Peron's 1946-55 dictatorship and ran second to Campora in the presidential election last March. His presence on the ticket with Peron would increase public opposition to any attempt to block the election.

Campora had been unable since his inauguration May 25 to suppress feuding among the diverse factions in the Peronist movement.

Canadian Content Ads Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Juneau announced Thursday that the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) is seeking regulations that would, in effect, ban foreign commercials from Canadian airwaves.

At a meeting of the Senate transport and communications committee, Juneau said the CRTC feels that regulations governing commercials are necessary. He is CRTC chairman.

He said the regulations will call for 100 per cent Canadian production of radio commercials, and Canadian content in television advertising will be "as close to 100 per cent as possible."

The Senate committee was considering a motion by Senator Sydney Buckwold (L—Saskatchewan) to ban foreign advertising in broadcasting.

Juneau said the regulation will be modelled on those now covering programming. Television and radio program content must be at least 60 per cent Canadian over a set period and never less than 50 per cent during any part of that period.

Jail Terms 'Illegal'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hundreds of young people now jailed in British Columbia for federal offences may be serving illegal sentences as a result of a far-reaching decision Thursday by the B.C. Court of Appeal which held that a vital portion of the federal prisons act is unconstitutional.

In a 2-1 decision that could also affect similar cases in Ontario, the appeal court held that section 150 of the Prison and Reformatories Act, which provides for an indefinite sentence along with a definite one, was inoperative in B.C. because it denied an accused equality before the law and contravened the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Crown Counsel George Murray said he has been instructed to appeal the decision to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The prisons act is in effect in only B.C. and Ontario and is designed to make it possible for a judge, at his own discretion, to give persons under 22 years of age an indefinite sentence along with a definite one following conviction of a federal offence.

The act is designed for rehabilitation purposes and puts the onus on the offender, by his own behavior in jail, to determine largely how much of the indefinite term he serves after completing the definite portion.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz and Mr. Justice A. E. Branca allowed the appeal of Patrick Dale Burnshine, 17, who was sentenced to three months definite and two years less a day indefinite last Dec. 19 following conviction in county court in Vancouver of creating a disturbance.

Vancouver lawyer D. J. Sorochan, representing Burnshine, told the court the potential total of the definite and indefinite sentence amount to 27 months. Had his client been charged for the same offence under the Criminal Code of Canada, the maximum sentence the court could have imposed was six months definite plus a possible fine.

He argued successfully that the county court judge had no jurisdiction to impose the definite and indefinite sentence because the prisons act contravened the Canadian Bill of Rights in that, had his client been charged in any one of the eight Canadian provinces other than B.C. or Ontario, he would have received the lesser sentence allowable under the Criminal Code, which does not provide for indeterminate sentences in such cases.

The appeal was fought entirely on constitutional grounds with Mr. Justice Branca and Mr. Justice Ne-

NIXON ILL

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon is in hospital suffering what White House doctors have diagnosed as viral pneumonia.

He is expected to remain "at least a week," Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said, but "will carry on his necessary work."

The 60-year-old president was reported ill and entered Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland Thursday night, after carrying on a day-long schedule despite reported discomfort.

White House physician Dr. Walter Tkach said he foresees "no complications," and that "rest and recuperation are the primary treatment."

DATSUN PLANT CONSIDERED FOR SEATTLE

SEATTLE (AP) — The Japanese car firm Nissan is considering Seattle as a site for a basic automobile assembly plant, John Anderson, a spokesman for Seattle-King County Economic Development Council said Thursday.

Last fall the company announced plans for a Datsun plant in B.C. but by December said there would be indefinite delay and possibly no plant at all.

Final decision on the Seattle plant is expected within the year. Anderson said a number of Japanese companies are looking at the U.S. as a place for plants because of the devalued dollar.

CZ Earnings Increase 137%

VANCOUVER CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. Thursday reported a 27 per cent increase in sales and a 137 per cent increase in net earnings for the first six months of 1973.

Sales for the period totalled $144.7 million, up from $113.5 million for the January-June period of 1972. Net earnings climbed to $14 million from $5.9 million.

Earnings per share equalled $1.77, compareed to 74 cents before extraordinary items a year ago.

Company President Robert Rogers said the earnings picture reflected continued strong demand for pulp, paper and wood products.

He said earnings for the full year of 1973 should exceed the best previous year by a considerable margin. Previous best for Crown Zellerbach Canada was 1964, when the company earned $15.1 million.

Pipe Clears Senate

WASHINGTON (CP) — The last major roadblock to a proposed trans-Alaska oil pipeline bill — an amendment calling for consideration of a Canadian route —was defeated today on the floor of the United States Senate.

The senators, voting mainly along east-west regional lines, defeated the measure 61 to 29.

The Senate immediately went on to consider other minor amendments, none of which was seen as a threat to the basic legislation proposed by Senator Henry Jackson (Dem.—Wash.) which comes up for a vote Tuesday.

The amendment was put forward by Senator Walter Mondale (Dem.—Minn.) who told his colleagues in a bitter floor debate preceding the vote that if Jackson's bill is passed "it will end up for years in court."

The Mondale amendment calls for a year's delay in pipeline construction to permit a study of a possible alternative line across Canada. The main Jackson bill would immediately remove restrictive right-of-way provisions in current federal law, but would leave construction of the proposed 800-mile, $3.5-billion Alaska line subject to court delay on environmental grounds.

Mondale suggested an independent study by the national Academy of Sciences to circumvent any judicial review.

Meanwhile, the U.S. state department denied there had been any effort to hold back information from congress on the Canadian government attitude toward construction of a pipeline for Alaskan oil.

100 in Queue for Neighborhood Pubs

More than 100 applications have been made for neighborhood pubs in the province —but the Liquor Control Board needs government clarification of regulations before it can act on the requests.

Liquor board secretary Gerald Devine said today the unofficial applications—"between 100 and 200'—have been received in the form of letters from all over B.C., including Victoria.

But the main problem encountered by the board to date, Devine said, has been the lack of description from the provincial government of what a neighborhood pub will be.

"We hate to do it, but so many letters are coming in, we are having to send a form letter out—telling them their letter is on file," he said.

Legislation passed at the spring session of the legislature set up a new type of liquor licence, called a "general licence." It is defined as allowing for "the sale and consumption on the establishment of liquor by the glass and light refreshments."

At the time the legislation was introduced, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said this would be the licence category under which the popular concept of neighborhood pubs would fall. But before any further action can be taken regarding the actual letting up of such facilities, regulations outlining the rules to be followed in the operation of the facilities must be written and published by the government.

Devine said that since the B.C. Liquor Board was formally established by proclamation on July 1, regulations can be expected sometime soon. He said they will either come directly from the attorney-general's department or from the three-man liquor board which was named last month.

The form letters sent to those persons applying to the board for neighborhood pub licences say their inquiries are a little premature and advises them to wait until the regulations specify exactly what a neighborhood pub is.

In the meantime, the board continues to process routine licence applications for other types of liquor facilities, including dining lounges, lounges and public houses, Devine said.

HEALTH CHIEF GETS $33,000

The chairman of the B.C. Medical Services Commission, Geoff Stewart, has received a 27 per cent salary increase from the provincial government, boosting his annual pay to $33,000. (See also Page 11).

Stewart's former salary was $26,000 per year. The increase is retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year.

The salary hike was made public in a Cabinet order-in-council released today.

Indians May Own Brantford

TORONTO (CP) — The thorny issue of Indian rights was thrown wide open Thursday by a Supreme Court of Ontario ruling that the Indian Act is inoperative and that the Six Nations Indian reserve near Brantford has no legal basis for being a reserve.

As a consequence, one lawyer said, the legal title to much of the land on which the city of Brantford is built is questionable.

And Mr. Justice John Osler, in his 24-page judgment, also came down heavily in favor of the historic Council of Hereditary Chiefs as rightful controllers of the reserve instead of the elected Indian council imposed by the federal government in 1924.

His judgment was based on precedents established in some of the first official land dealings between colonial administrators and Indians in what is now Canada.

The case arose from an injunction brought by the elected council against the hereditary chiefs seeking to bar them from the 87-year-old reserve council house. The application was dismissed and the injunction, which was continued since 1970 on an interim basis, was dissolved by Mr. Justice Osler.

Reaction to the ruling was swift and mixed.

Some older Indians on the Six Nations reserve, traditionalists supporting the hereditary chiefs, hailed the judgment as a victory.

A spokesman for the federal Indian affairs department in Ottawa expressed surprise at the decision and said the department would study the judgment before deciding what action, if any, to take.

John Gasson, executive director of the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada, said in Toronto that although the ruling came in a provincial supreme court, it might have repercussions across the country.

"Most Indians feel that they have rights far beyond whatever the Indian Act grants them, but many will still view with apprehension the removal of protection, however great or small, afforded under the act," he said.

Mr. Justice Osler said that in his opinion the Indian Act "is inoperative by virtue of its discrimination by reason of race."

He cited a Supreme Court of Canada ruling that declared invalid, because of discrimination, a section of the act relating to liquor, and to a judgment pending in the same court on another section by which a woman loses her Indian status upon marriage to a non-Indian.

"For all practical purposes the entire act must now be held to be inoperative," said Mr. Justice Osler.

SATURDAY EYED FOR FRENCH TEST

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — Weather stations reported good climatic conditions in the South Pacific today, fueling expectations that France's first nuclear test of 1973 might come Saturday — Bastille Day.

Scientists have stressed that perfect weather is essential to guard against radioactive fallout from the atmospheric explosion drifting toward inhabited areas.

In Paris, the organizations Peace Media and Frenchmen Against The Bomb announced that further group of protesters had joined the New Zealand frigate Otago and the international peace ship Fri in the danger zone round the test site, Mururoa Atoll, 720 miles southeast of this Polonesian capital.

A statement said Frencr Gen. Paris de Bollardiere and his companions, Jean-Marie Mulller, Brice Lalonde and Rev. Jean Toulat, "arrived in the Mururoa nuclear zone on a boat on which they sailed for the Cook Islands 11 days ago.

"They have confirmed by radio their intention to remain in the zone to prevent the tests," it said.

The statement said another protest ship, the Spirit of Peace, would leave for the area next week.

Car Price Tags Don't Mean Much

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — General Motors must tell California car buyers that the price tag on an auto doesn't necessarily show what it sells for.

GM and the state attorney-general's office agreed Thursday that beginning with 1974 models, new cars will bear a sticker pointing out that the federaly-required "manufacturer's suggested retail price" may be higher than the going price for th auto.

Cong Clear Pick-Up

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong said Friday a peacekeeping force team would be sent into the jungle areas northwest of Saigon Saturday to pick up two Canadians missing since they wandered into "no man's land" June 28.

The Canadians themselves withheld comment pending the actual release of the two officers. Delegation chief Michel Gauvin secured a postponement of Friday's regular meeting of the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) until the officers were released.

It was at Xuan Loc, 40 miles northeast of Saigon, where the two Canadians — Capt. Ian Patten, 31, of Toronto, and Capt. Fletcher Thomson, 25, of Ottawa — disappeared June 28 on a fact-finding mission.

In Washington, meanwhile, reports say the United States will start quietly pulling its B52 bombers out of Southeast Asia this weekend, preparing to end the last traces of U.S. military involvement in the Indochina War.

Administration sources said Thursday the slow withdrawal may never be announced publicly for fear of upsetting delicate negotiations seeking to establish a ceasefire in Cambodia before the Aug. 15 deadline for ending U.S. involvement in the war there.

Sources, said, however, that the pullout would have no impact on the rate of B52 bombing raids in Cambodia before Aug. 15. The eight-engine bombers have been flying about 40 strikes a day since late May.

. . . PIPELINE

"Everything we have received from Canada we have passed on to the Senate and House committees promptly," said an official close to Canadian affairs.

The spokesman was replying to a charge in the senate Thursday by Senator Birch Bayh that the state department had been "misleading" the Senate.

"The state department, in my judgment, has been misleading the Senate on Canada's attitude toward a trans-Canada pipeline, and I am accusing it of attempting to hold back vital information on this issue from the Congress," Senator Bayh charged.

The Indiana senator is a staunch opponent of the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline, preferring instead a route from Alaska through Canada to the "lower 48 states."

The state department official said Bayh's annoyance stems from a simple difference of interpretation of the Canadian government's intentions.

He said the department is fully aware of a statement made by Prime Minister Trudeau to Parliament May 14, referred to by Bayh.

In that statement, Trudeau said Canada would be prepared to consider the Mackenzie Valley route "if there is an application made in the proper form."

The state department official said Bayh interprets this statement in a different manner than the state department and there is a basic difference between the senator and the department on the Canadian attitude.

In a related development, the U.S. Army corps of engineers stated in a report to Congress that by 1980 there will be great economic incentives to develop deepwater oil port facilities on the U.S. west coast, even though these ports "could adversely affect the environment."

Such ports would, however, reduce the environmental disadvantages of ports now handling oil shipments with smaller vessels.

Ports capable of handling giant oil tankers could cut the cost of importing oil into the U.S. by as much as $290 million a year, the report said.

Explaining the advantages of oil superports, the report said:

"Using a smaller number of larger tankers would reduce congestion in shipping lanes and decrease the probability of massive oil spills caused by collisions and groundings."

Savings in the cost of transporting oil into neighboring states would result from having deepwater west coast ports whether or not the Alaska oil pipeline is built, the report said.

metz ruling that the sentence should be quashed on grounds it was illegal because of discrimination. Mr. Justice H. A. Maclean dissented, holding that there was no discrimination.

Court officials said the ruling could touch off a flood of habeus corpus applications by young offenders in B.C. and similar appeals could also be launched in Ontario.

In his decision, Mr. Justice Nemetz said, "It is manifest that in this case the sentence which might be served is in excess of the maximum established under the Criminal Code of Canada."

After noting that the prison act is not operative in eight of the 10 provinces, Mr. Justice Nemetz added that the Canadian Bill of Rights guarantees not only equality before the law but additional equality in protection of the law.

"In my view, such equal protection of the law is not afforded to young British Columbians where a statute provides for a longer prison term for the same offence to be imposed in this province than for every province in Canada except Ontario."

Mr. Justice Maclean said B.C. and Ontario were pioneers in the system of correction of young offenders by use of indeterminate sentences.

the weather

Southern British Columbia was sunny and warm again today with indications currently that the sunny weather will persist through the weekend. Sunny conditions have also extended into the central interior but a weak onshore flow will maintain cloud and light drizzle on the north coast. Patchy low cloud and fog lies over the Pacific off the B.C. coast and will drift onshore along the outer coast at times tonight and Saturday.

Workers Seek Hearing

The union representing five child-care workers dismissed from their jobs at the Pacific Centre for Human Development will ask for a hearing before the Labor Relations Board.

John Shield, spokesman for the Social Services Employees' Union, said today the union will appeal under fair labor practices rulings which say no employee can be fired for attemptng to form a union.

The workers were fired June 22, shortly after they has applied to have the union act as their bargaining agent.

Two days earlier the five had walked off their jobs at the Colwood centre for adolescent boys and camped outside protesting "intolerable conditions."

A sixth worker at the centre who was dismissed later has now signed the application for union representation. That means, the workers say, six out of seven working at the home at the time of the walkout, have joined the union.

Dr. Charels Gregory, director of the centre, says the workers were fired for walking off the job and adds that they are only six out of some 60 workers employed by the whole centre, which has another home in Metchosin.

The LRB has not decided on the union certification yet, Shield said, because "the first thing to determine is whether the firing was legal."

Tenants Urge Gov't to Buy Apartments

A local tenant organization wants the province to "consider buying apartments Victoria landlords are willing to unload for quick profit" to prevent apartment conversions.

A resolution passed by the Capital Region Tenants' Association 200 members Wednesday also advocates that the provincial government acquire land for housing construction.

A one-year moratorium on apartment conversion is another suggestion by the group to allow municipalities time for a "complete investigation of this urgent problem."

Association president Vern Weaver said today the "human problems" involved in an apartment-condominium switch must be investigated by all levels of government.

He said tenants should have the right of security, "especially in the older age group of tenants."

Victoria has a unique situation, Weaver added, in that more than 30,000 people are older than 65 with 27 per cent of that population more than 80 years old.

He claims that when elderly people were faced with the problem "of buying or getting out" of four converted apartments in Victoria, "there were many heart attacks and two deaths prior to the conversions."

"It would be hard to prove that the two were linked, but they still happened," he said.

The association — the majority of members are retired citizens — will also present a petition to the provincial government asking that rent levels be justified by rent review boards and massive amounts of provincial government money be invested in government-owned apartments.

Blood Quota Set

A quota of 550 pints has been set for this month's Red Cross blood donor clinics.

Monday's clinics will be held from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m. at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort.

HMCS Terra Nova will be used Tuesday from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1:15 to 3 p.m. by blood donors from armed forces' ships and dockyard personnel.

Two clinics will be held at the Student Union Building of the University of Victoria Wednesday. These will be from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Transportation to the clinics is available by phoning 382-2213.

"IT'S NOT JUST THE COLOURS, OR THE DESIGN"

When choosing drapes, there are many things to consider besides the colours, the design, or the texture of the material . . . For instance, are they to be hanging from ceiling to the floor? . . . From the tops of the window frames to the floor? . . . Or, are they to just hang from tops to bottoms of the windows? . . . Is it your intention to have the drapes open during the daylight hours? . . . Or, is it the plan to have them, more or less permanently drawn? . . . If so, then the drapery material must be of a texture which will admit daylight and at the same time, give you privacy . . . In this case, a boucle type of material would be just right! . . . There are a number of fabrics most suitable for draperies, such as Lace, Brocade, Chintz, Damask . . . and if the room happens to face the north, Velvet will give you warmth and luxury . . . You must also decide whether you are going to have the curtains lined or un-lined, but here, the kind of materials to be used will help you to decide . . . The chosen colours and, whether the fabric you choose will be in a solid colour and with a design, will depend on the colour and designs of the other furnishings to be in the same room . . . You know the feeling one has on entering a room which has been very thoughtfully planned . . . Everything seems to go with everything! . . . Nothing clashes! . . . This is where expert advice is often required . . . and this is available at MACDONALD'S FURNITURE MART, 1420 BROAD ST., where advice is given freely . . . U.S. DOLLAR 'NERVOUS'

LONDON (UPI) — The U.S. dollar met mixed fortunes in nervous and uncertain world money markets today and nobody seemed willing to bet on which way it would go.

The dollar opened higher in Paris, lower in Amsterdam, higher in London, barely higher in Frankfurt. Movements were marginal and trading was "both nervous and light," according to a London dealer.

In London it took $2.5422 in U.S. currency to buy a British pound, compared with $2.5433 Thursday night.

Nixon Tried to Find Real Truth: Moore

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — White House special counsel Richard Moore testified today President Nixon sought repeatedly in March to get the facts about Watergate out in the open, and rejected a suggestion that the FBI check into the campaign histories of members of the Senate Watergate Committee.

Moore's testimony before the Senate Watergate hearings continued to differ sharply in interpretation with that of ousted White House counsel John Dean.

Moore said that Dean once proposed using the FBI to investigate members of the Senate committee in hopes of uncovering information that could be used to show that the scandal was nothing new in poliics.

In a meeting with Nixon designed to plot moves "to get our side of the story out," Moore said that Dean told Nixon he had worked on Capitol Hill and knew that there were few political campaigns where 'something questionable or illegal" was not done.

"We were asked for ideas on where we could take the initiative, and in that meeting at one point, Dean said to the president —'You know, one way for us to take the initiative' would be to get some responsbile official to suggest that the members of the Watergate committee should submit to an FBI investigation of their past political campaigns."

* * *

Moore said that Nixon dismissed Dean's idea.

Moore also testified today that until March 19 of this year he had considered the Watergate raid no more than an "unauthorized adventure" by people who had some $100 bills and enjoy playing James Bond.

Moore told investigating senators he did not know of official or campaign involvment or cover-up.

He has said he does not believe Nixon knew about it.

Moore said he did not know the dimensins of Watergate when he and others discussed at a California resort a need for money in connection with the problems it had raised.

He said he agreed at that Feb. 11 meeting to ask former attorney-general John Mitchell for fund-raising help, considering it necessary in connection with civil suits that developed from Watergate.

Moore said that when he carried that message to Mitchell later, the response was in effect: "Get lost."

Former White House aide H. R. Haldeman has told Senate investigators he neither participated in nor knew anything about the effort to cover up the Watergate scandal, the New York Times reported today.

* * *

The statement by Nixon's closest aide, contradicts testimoney given the Senate Watergate Committee by both Dean and Mitchell, who both said Haldeman participated in the cover-up.

The Times, quoting a 20-page text of the testimony Haldeman made in an interview with the staff of the Watergate committee May 4, reported that 'Haldeman said he did not know of any cover-up until March of this year.

"I got no indication from Dean that there was an effort being made to cover up involvement of individuals in the White House and C.R.P. (Committee to Re-Elect the President) re Watergate until March of April (1973)," Haldeman's testimony says, according to The Times.

"I became suspicious about a cover-up indirectly . . . in March, 1973 . . ."

Mitchell told the Senate Watergate Committee during his three-day appearance this week that he discussed the cover-up with both Haldeman and John Erlichman, Nixon's other top aide.

Previously, Dean testified that Erlichman and Haldeman participated in the cover-up and that Nixon knew about it.

* * *

Mitchell, meanwhile, completed 15 hours of openly skeptical questioning by the Senate committee Thursday in Washington with the announced intention of "going back to my hotel room and getting a drink. Scotch preferably."

Looking haggard and flushed, the former attorney-general had much to ponder while sipping his favorite whisky in his hotel room.

There was the Vesco indictment under which he goes to trial later this year; possible legal action because of his involvement in the Watergate cover-up; and the ringing charge of a Senate investigator that he may have lied under oath.

Under dogged questioning by the committee, Mitchell declared for three days that his aim in not telling Nixon about the Watergate cover-up was to protect the president's re-election and keep the lid on a series of "White House horrors."

In other developments, a House of Representatives investigation was ordered Thursday into federal funds spent on homes owned by Nixon and vice-president Agnew.

The investigation will be conducted by a house government operations subcommittee headed by Rep. Jack Brooks. Brooks said that while he recognizes the need to protect the president and vice-president, "any expenditures that are essentially for improvements that any home-owner might routinely have to undertake should not be paid for out of taxpayers' funds under the guise of security protection."

GROWERS WIN INJUNCTION

VERNON (CP) — The running battle between Allied Growers Ltd. and the British Columbia Fruit Board gained momentum Thursday when the growers obtained a three-fold injunction against the fruit board.

Clay Larson, lawyer for the dissident growers group, said the injunction, issued in Kamloops, by Mr. Justice Patrick Dohm of the B.C. Supreme Court, restrains the board and its employees from creating a nuisance around the Allied packing house at Okanagan Centre near Kelowna, from searching the packing house and from seizing cherries.

A New Title For Strachan

Transportation Minister Robert Strachan has had his official title changed and his specific responsibilities clarified by the provincial cabinet.

Strachan will be referred to officially as the minister of transportation and communications, a change from the former title of minister of commercial transport and communications.

A cabinet order-in-council released today specifies that he will take over responsibility in the following areas, where other ministers have held responsibility: Motor Vehicle Branch, Data Processing Centre, B.C. Ferries, including Department of Highways coastal ferries, provincial aircraft, telephones and communication and the Motor Carrier Branch.

In addition, Strachan is the president of B.C. Insurance Corporation, is a member of the board of directors of the B.C. Railway and will become the railway's president in the spring of 1974.

Duncan IWA Appeal Lost

The B.C. Labor Relations Board has turned down an appeal by the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) over certifications at three mills it lost to the Nanaimo local of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada (PPWC).

The IWA launched its appeal May 17 against the results of certification votes at Mayo Lumber and CIPA Lumber in Nanaimo and Ladysmith Forest Products.

The employees at the three mills voted May 8 for PPWC as bargaining agent, replacing the IWA. Later the board granted certification to PPWC.

The B.C. labor department weekly summary of activities, released today, said the Labor Relations Board, after considering submissions of the parties and a report on the investigation, decided it is not prepared to vary or cancel its decision "because no evidence has been submitted which would warrant any change in its decision."

Beads Ban Necklace

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer affairs department warned Thursday that bead necklaces partially made up of poisonous jequirity beans have been on sale to the public since June 30.

The department said in a news release that the beans, red with a black tip at one end, were sold by Miracle Mart Ltd. and are dangerous if chewed.

The necklaces have been taken off the market, but the federal department warns that some may be in the hands of consumers. (They were never on sale in Victoria).

Under the Midnight Sun

In an unprecedented case the federal government is pitting two courts of equal stature against each other in the North West Territories. The issue surfaced when the Indian Brotherhood of the North West Territories tried in April to impose a legal caveat, or declaration of interest, on 400,000 square miles of tundra which makes up most of the Western Arctic and the Mackenzie River Valley.

Resolving the issue is especially important to the Indians because the federal government has discussed plans to build a $5 billion pipeline through the MacKenzie Valley, and the Indians want a piece of the action.

The N.W.T. land titles office refused to accept the Indian caveat until it had been approved by Mr. Justice William Morrow, a Supreme Court judge and the highest legal authority in the north. When Judge Morrow agreed to hear the case federal lawyers said the judge had no jurisdiction to decide on matters involving land owned by the Crown. Only a federal court could hear the case, they argued, because of the N.W.T.'s colonial status within Confederation. While admitting that the federal arguments might be true, Judge Morrow insisted on hearing all the evidence before making up his mind on jurisdiction.

The government tried to stop the hearings and even considered applying for a writ to restrict the judge's powers. But a special Northern sitting of the federal court of Canada backfired. The federal court, perhaps unwilling to be pitted against another supreme court judge, rejected a federal attempt to prohibit Judge Morrow from hearing evidence. Last Monday the federal government withdrew its lawyers from the case. In other words, the federal government will not argue its case before Judge Morrow.

The Trudeau administration is on questionable ground in this instance. By trying to bypass the highest court in the North, which is also appointed by the federal government, Ottawa is on the thin edge of being in contempt of its own court.

In a 30-page preliminary judgment Judge Morrow said his court does have the necessary authority to hear the case, adding that Ottawa's action was an "affront to my court and to me — a breach of constitutional etiquette unheard of in Canadian history. . . ."

Both as a lawyer and as a jurist Judge Morrow has been famed for his compassionate view of Indian and Eskimo rights, something which may explain the federal government's action. But if it explains the government's actions, it does not excuse them. Judge Morrow's opinion on his right to hear the case has been vindicated by the federal court of Canada. He should therefore get on with the case.

Time for Action

Let's hope that Victoria's four central municipalities are able to implement the commonsense advice of the Intermunicipal Committee and acquire the Royal Theatre from Famous Players Ltd. If they do, the Victoria Symphony Orchestra will be assured of a home until such time as the capital city can boast a proper concert hall. At present the musical group can be deprived of its stage on 30 days' notice should Famous Players find a buyer for the property. The Royal is far from being an ideal base of operations for the orchestra, but where else is there?

Assuming the theatre becomes municipally-owned, the chief danger will be that a stop-gap arrangement will be permitted to drag on into semi-permanence. Victoria deserves a fine cultural centre which could house not only the Symphony but other artistic groups, as well as offering a stage to larger touring companies which avoid Victoria because of the lack of facilities.

Many plans have been advanced with that end in view but have foundered through inertia, or political bickering, or sheer impracticality. Government help is inescapable but it's time that private citizens and businesses came out from their cover to make this a real civic project. After all, that was the spirit that build the Royal Theatre 60 years ago.

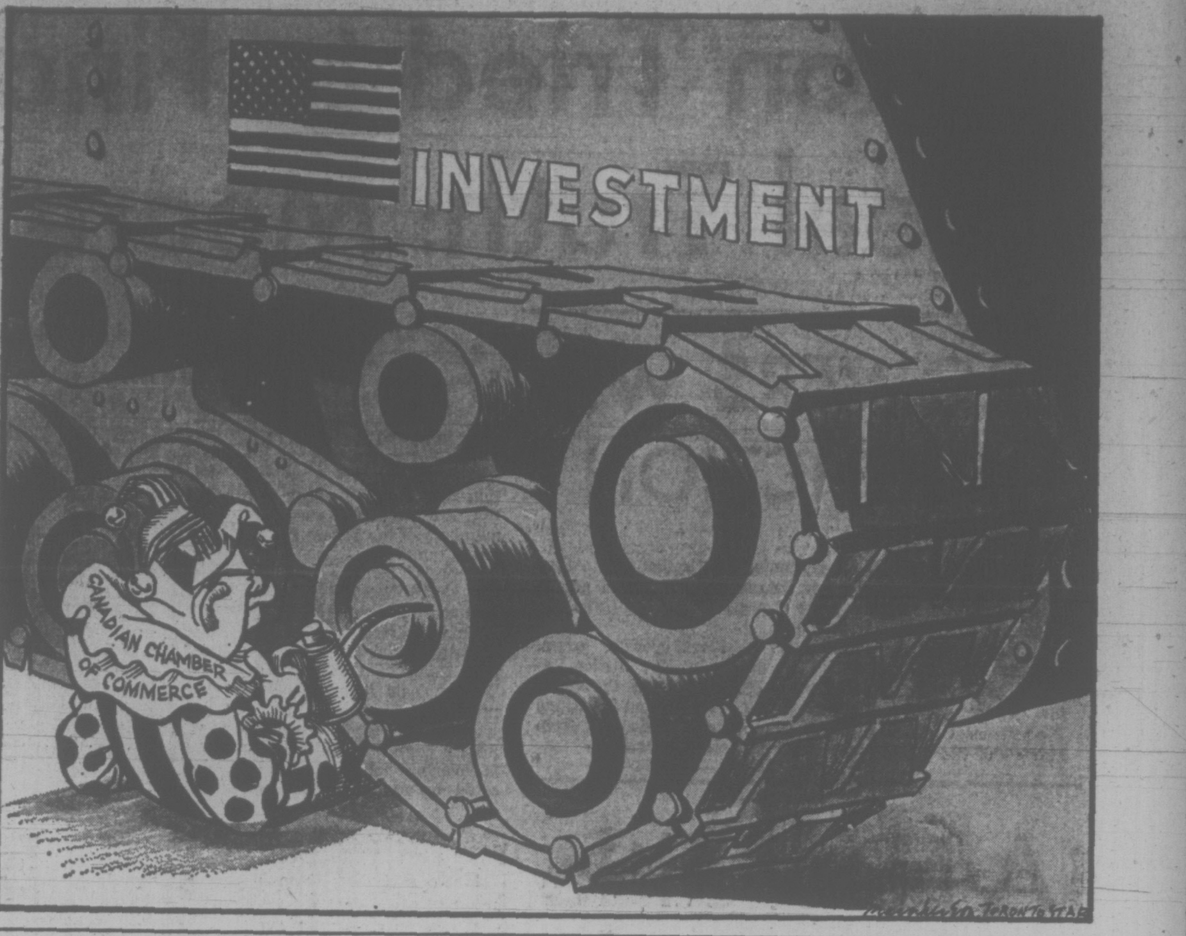
So Far, So Good

It is good to see that the Capital Regional District Board is losing no time in moving ahead with plans to extend the Clover Point sewer outfall. The test of the three-year-old facility off Macaulay Point has proved that the outfall extending far into the Strait has had no deleterious ecological effects. The way is therefore open to carry out a similar improvement at Clover Point.

The continued existence of the latter outfall, extending only a few feet offshore, is an anomaly in the twentieth century. It is in a class with open drainage ditches alongside city streets. However, in its extended form, this outfall will serve Victoria, Oak Bay and part of Saanich.

The immediate value of the Macaulay test is that it appears to postpone into the indefinite future the need for secondary and tertiary treatment of the sewage. As the population increases, that requirement may eventually come. But the open sea is nature's sewage treatment facility and so far apparently can handle the local job.

The Straits are not infinite, however. Constant observation of the effects of both outfalls should be continued, and at the first sign that the system is becoming overloaded and the offshore waters rendered unfit as a human environment there should be action to meet the need through artifical means, expensive though this will be.



MAURICE WESTERN

Pressure for Quicker Action

OTTAWA — Not since the first days of the session has the Trudeau government endured anything like the pressure of the present week for a change of economic course.

There was some feeling until quite recently, encouraged no doubt by the published polls, that with the improvement in employment, the government had survived its time of trouble. This took inadequate account of the price surge, the strength of which—as revealed in the latest report on Statistics Canada—has probably concerned the Ministers.

Robert Stanfield in Parliament has mounted the heaviest attack yet on the ministers. It opened on Tuesday and was sustained on Wednesday, with some rather ominous if unintended assistance from the New Democrats. Question period, often given over to fishing expeditions, has become a raging debate, with Opposition members attempting insistently to shake the ministers from the fixed positions which they have occupied throughout the session.

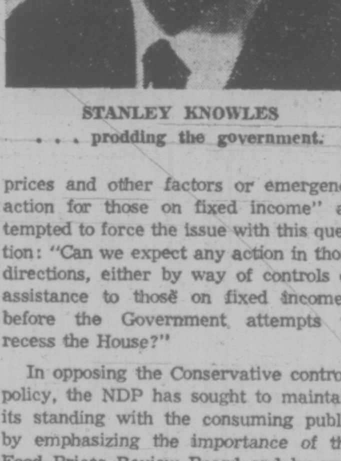
Emergency

At intervals since January there have been formal debates on economic policy. None of them was particularly exciting and none appeared to occasion much embarrassment to the ministers. The current informal debate is different. On the Conservative side, John Diefenbaker spoke on Wednesday of a parliamentary declaration of emergency as a legal basis for controls.

Mrs. Grace MacInnis had indignantly demanded the previous day: "Will it take food riots to get action from the Government?"

What is different, then, is the note of urgency in parliamentary proceedings. It is obvious that the parties are reacting in different ways to a changing mood which they discern in the country. The government is certainly feeling the same pressure but it has not been moved to new responses although the old ones sound more shopworn and less and less convincing. This in itself gives rise to rumors that the ministers are merely stalling for time while some new action is planned.

The Conservative demand was and is for a price freeze followed by a regime of controls for a definite period, probably two years. It has not changed in substance but it has become more imperative. Thus on Tuesday, Mr. Stanfield, speaking of "direct action in relation to prices and other factors or emergency action for those on fixed income" attempted to force the issue with this question: "Can we expect any action in those directions, either by way of controls or assistance to those on fixed incomes, before the Government attempts to recess the House?"



STANLEY KNOWLES
. . . prodding the government.

In opposing the Conservative controls policy, the NDP has sought to maintain its standing with the consuming public by emphasizing the importance of the Food Prices Review Board and by urging a more realistic escalation of pensions, also a Liberal theme. But the NDP advocated a Board with teeth and has plainly been disappointed. Doubtless in response to feeling in the constituencies, is now pressing the government to accord new powers to the Board.

At the same time Stanley Knowles, in his familiar role, has been prodding the government on the matter of Canada Pensions, still subject to the two per cent escalation ceiling. On Wednesday, Mr. Knowles brought this up again and drew the response that the matter involved the consent of the provinces and that discussions were expected this fall. This was in accord with Mr. Lalonde's earlier intimation that the government plans to make the change in 1974.

Action Now

But Mr. Knowles was not satisfied. He wants a simple legislative amendment: he wants the government to obtain the needed consent immediately to present the bill for passage before the adjournment. Nothing could better illustrate the new mood. The rising demand of opposition members is for action, not in accordance with some leisurely timetable, but for action now.

The mixed position policy must be based on an assumption that if the ministers can resist long enough and skilfully enough, the storm will pass. From present trends this appears unlikely. In addition, the government may have increased its vulnerability to pressure in the present House by its own record of accepting Opposition policies which it had earlier rejected with some scorn.

Even the policy for supporting small business, announced by Alastair Gillespie on Wednesday, bears a marked similarity to earlier proposals of Robert Stanfield, a fact which the Conservative critic, Paul Hellyer, promptly noted.

How long the government can resist this pressure remains to be seen. Much obviously depends on the parliamentary skill of the Conservatives and more probably on the tidings received by government members from hard-pressed consumers in the country.

CHARLES BARTLETT

Some Basic Changes Needed

WASHINGTON — President Nixon needs more than anyone the fellow who used to boast that he wanted to come to Washington and tighten everything that is loose and loosen everything that is tight.

He could begin by tightening up the president's alibi. It is slack and getting slacker because the inner circle has been fragmented and no central figure is working now to pull the story together. Messrs. Nixon, Haldeman, and Ehrlichman, all under suspicion, are wary of being caught in close consultation, so no one is calling the signals.

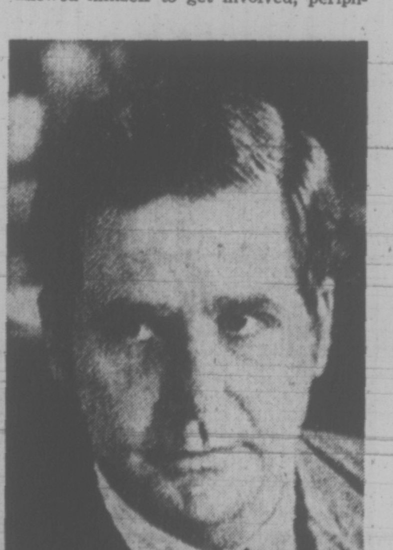
Eating Away

This disarray is eating away at the viability of the president's position. This was clear when Ehrlichman went on television after John Dean had completed his testimony and refused to comment on Dean's allegations. He said he wanted time to get set for his own testimony, a reasonable concern which made it puzzling that he had agreed to be interviewed in the first place.

Similarly damaging was the television appearance by Charles Colson, who was the president's scorpion's tail in palmier days. But his great knack for stinging Nixon enemies has not kindled respect in the political community, so he is a weak choice to speak for the president's cause, particularly when he is pushing a shaky story.

It is impossible to accept Colson's defence of the president because he is saying that Dean was obscuring his role in the cover-up of a crime in which he had no part. The crime was Mitchell-Magruder business and no one has yet tied that into the White House. But the cover-up was presidential business of the most urgent type and Colson defies the public's good sense by alleging that Dean conducted the cover-up as though it were a conspiracy which not even the president could penetrate.

Flagrant falsehoods infuriate Congress, the press and the public into a stiffer resolution to sniff out the truth. The situation is that the president has allowed himself to get involved, peripherally and directly, in a wide range of shoddy political activities.



JEB MAGRUDER
. . . quite an honor.

He is not going to save his reputation or his job by letting subordinates take the blame and by asking the public to believe that he was wholly distracted from the politics of 1972. A show of deep contrition is going to yield him more buoyancy in these heavy seas than the flashiest alibis.

The lower levels of the Nixon White House were always fragmented into little cliques, often of rather miniscule men who were fond of knifing each other. But the top level was efficiently designed to hold the bag of battling aides together. Haldeman and Ehrlichman functioned as alter egos in order to pervade the scene in the president's behalf, and a direct feed into one of them was a crucial design feature of every organizational innovation.

For example, this reporter remembers well Jeb Magruder's happiness at being selected as the man to set up the committee to re-elect the president. This was quite an honor for a young man and he happily explained that he had been tapped because he had secured the confidence of both Haldeman and Ehrlichman. The key task, as he understood it, would be to take great pains to ensure that both men were equally and totally informed about all that was being done politically.

Must Be Purged

The White House staff is going to need tightening along with the alibi. It cannot facilitate the president's recapture of his momentum while it stays an inert blanket covering the sins of the past. It has to be purged somehow of hang-ups and neuroses which are going to keep it from adjusting to the new kind of leadership the president presumably wanted when he named Melvin Laird and Bruce Harlow.

The president needs to make more changes and to make them with gusto. He has not yet convinced anyone that he really sees any need for change as a result of the Watergate affair. He is not going to begin rallying support until he shows that he is determined to loosen his uptight style of leadership.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

British Pensions

Further to the article in "The Times" on June 28, "How to be a Passport Briton" by David Humphries:

I would like to know why a British person living in Canada is not given the same facilities and consideration as a Canadian in England, i.e. why is the British Pension rate frozen at the time the pensioner immigrates to Canada? Can anyone please tell me how and why we are expected to exist on the meagre amount per month, taking into account the various fluctuations of the dollar over the years.

Why don't Canada and Great Britain have a reciprocal agreement for pensions, such as exists in other countries which are not in the Commonwealth? Such an agreement is long overdue and should be a matter of great importance to the pension authorities of both Great Britain and Canada.

British pensioners do not want Canadian charity, they only want the increments that are paid to British pensioners living in U.K. Why should we be penalized by the British Government for wanting to spend our retirement years living with our families in Canada? —Mrs. Dorothy Barlow.

Ferry Food

At one time a person could get a real quality meal with fast, friendly service on the B.C. Ferries. Over the past two years the quality of the food has been sliding quietly downhill to the point where the ferries restaurants are now second-rate eateries. The service is still there, but stewards and waiters almost apologetically place your meal before you, expecting complaints because they know the quality is no longer there.

Second-rate cuts of meat have replaced the best cuts. Clam chowder that was once superb is now mediocre. At one time, whole turkeys were purchased and, like mother used to do, even the bones were used for soup stock. Now the turkey you get on board comes from a can.

Who is getting rich on kick-backs while the paying public suffers in silence (so far)?

Please, Mr. Strachan, take a good look at this situation, for we don't mind paying the price as long as we get the quality that the B.C. Ferries restaurants were once noted for. —C. R. Clarke, 3947 Morgan St.

Pensions

Other people as well as myself are grateful to you for the publicity you have given to our campaign to obtain the various increases to the British Retirement Pension as they become due and our thanks are also due to Mr. Donald Munro and Mr. Allan McKinnon for bringing the matter to the notice of the Minister of National Health and Welfare in Ottawa.

It surely seems to be a fantastic situation that some member nations of the Commonwealth have reciprocal agreements with the United Kingdom which provide for the payment of all increases to those who receive this pension while other members of the Commonwealth, including Canada, do not. The time to end this situation seems to be now, following our Queen's visit to Canada when she made her plea for more unity within the Commonwealth, of which she is the head, as well as being Queen of Canada.

As the Monarchy has the capability of providing continuity and thus can be a unifying institution, surely Canada, being a senior member of the Commonwealth, can do what is necessary to achieve at least this measure of unity.—W. F. A. Preston, 849 Hampshire Rd.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 13, 1913:

The Fernie press and board of trade have opened a campaign against real estate sharks peddling worthless subdivision lots to credulous working men and women. As the result of an indignation meeting an information office has been established and the gross misrepresentation of real estate wildcatters will be mercilessly aired and prosecuted. Other communities are following the example of Fernie and the movement will be continued until every real estate fakir is run out of the country. The intelligence office has already many pathetic instances of people who have been denying themselves the necessities of life in order to meet payments to cold-hearted scoundrels on property that is not worth one-twentieth the price that is being paid for it.

The Revolution of Expectations That Flopped

By MAX WILDE
London Observer

The growing-up years of the babies born during World War II gave rise to "the revolution of rising expectations," the boasted achievements of science and technology which were to transform lives — feed the hungry, treat the sick, and liberate them from the degradations of poverty. Now that these war babies are reaching their thirties, there is enough nuclear "overkill" to provide at least 70 tons of TNT-equivalent for every man, woman and child on earth.

At the same time men have broken the gravitational limitations of the planet and landed on the moon; electronic devices have excelled, for specific purposes, the human senses and surpassed the memory capacity of the human brain; and living organs can be transplanted in intensive care units.

But, says Lord Ritchie-Calder, in an appraisal of the application of science and technology to development, issued for the guidance of the 55th session of the UN Economic and Social Council in Geneva this month, the plight of two-thirds of the world's people has not improved. Proportionately, it has even worsened. There are more people to share the misery. For every beat of the human pulse there is another mouth to be fed — and preponderantly in the less-developed countries. Globally there is enough food per head of the world's population, but not per stomach, and new concern about protein is a reminder that there is not enough proper nourishment to go round.

The drift into town increases urban squalor; unemployment grows, and with it comes deprivation and denial of human dignity. After years of trying to increase educational opportunities, the illiteracy rate has dropped, but the number of illiterates in the world, by addition and multiplication, has increased.

"It is obvious," says Ritchie-Calder, "that the developing countries are struggling up the down escalator, and through the technology of communications, the people know it and resent it. This frustration of expectations calls for a sober reappraisal of the ways in which science and technology have been deployed in terms of the poorer countries and it calls for action."

British-born Ritchie-Calder, who has worried about all this for years, is at present a senior fellow at the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara, California. He says a shortage of trained scientists in developing countries is one of the problems. Policy-makers without adequate scientific advice find themselves unable to evaluate or to count the consequences of unsuitable innovations.

"They are like a housewife being persuaded by a plausible salesman into buying an electric vacuum cleaner though she has no electricity, or an encyclopaedia when what she needs is a pair of glasses ... Inappropriate technology can distort a social structure or currupt the real development needs."

In the advanced countries the promotion of technology in the interests of economic growth has been to the neglect of social side-effects. While less developed countries desperately need economic growth to achieve their social purposes, developed countries are now embarrassed by the social problems which untrammelled productivity has produced.

"To tell a worker that with a flick of a switch he could command electron-slaves equivalent to 100 human assistants was poor consolation for the monotony of the production line," says Ritchie-Calder. "High up the hierarchy, executives have been fired by the computers they hired, because the machines could qualify and give a determinism of numbers in places of the 'hunches' and 'shrewd judgments' of a lifetime of business experience."

Moreover, "the traditional methods of managing the economic system are proving ineffective and the monetary system is staggering through inconsistencies, and balance of payments crises, into the crazy paradox that the most advanced scientific and technological nation on earth has to devalue its dollar."

What then is "appropriate technology"? In developing countries, says Ritchie-Calder, importing experts (often from multinational corporations) makes a process work, but also makes a country dependent on outside experts and leaves it, in an emergency, with no means of improvising. No matter how generous, disinterested, or scrupulous the "sharing of knowledge and skills" may be, there is no real alternative in the long run to providing cadres of scientifically trained nationals.

"Appropriate technology" is a country choosing what is most suitable to the needs and present capacities of its people, whether it is in ideas or techniques proven elsewhere and adaptable; or in indigenous innovation by which a country can acquire a self-sufficiency. This gives the assurance and the incentives to advance to more sophisticated educationally-acquired science and technology."

But the most urgent problem and the highest priority is feeding the people. The growth of population in the less developed countries would require an 80 per cent increase in food supplies by 1985 as compared with 1962, without any improvement in the quantity or quality of individual diets. Any improvement in purchasing power will increase that figure by another 40 per cent.

If the increase in food production in developing countries does not improve, this would mean that they would have to import from the rest of the world $26 billion worth of food a year. For Asia, the Middle East and North-West Africa, 90 million tons of food imports would be required or, alternatively, if present agricultural practices are not changed, 100 million hectares would have to be diverted from other crops and livestock to growing cereals. (At present only some 20 million hectares in Asia and Africa are now producing high-yielding varieties of wheat and rice.)

The situation is even more serious where protein deficiency is concerned. Only a quarter of the animal protein required by 1985 in the less developed countries could be produced domestically if the livestock production continues at the present low level. But, as Lord Ritchie-Calder points out, "for tens of millions of people, 1985 is already here."

Leave Security To the RCMP

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

No one disputes that we need research and planning on security matters. The sole issue is to whom the group doing this should report. Should it be directly to a politician, the solicitor - general? Or should it be to the commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who, in turn, reports to the solicitor-general?

The difference is profound, If the research and planning unit is within the RCMP, even as a largely civilian unit, it will be able to preserve sufficient aloofness from partisan politics to allow it to protect as well as serve the public.

* * *

The RCMP is one step removed from the minister's office. It does not disclose gratuitously all the rumors, suspicions, peccadillos, propensities and, yes, just plain dirt that it has information about, although this information might seem highly interesting to some politicians.

No. The RCMP is an institution that Canadians have come to trust. It has recognized procedures; its own sense of honor and propriety; a highly refined sense of duty. It will report to the minister when it believes there is a possible threat to the peace or security. It will protect the reputations of Canadians, and very assiduously, when it believes there is no threat.

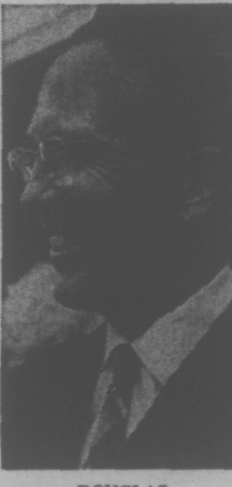
* * *

By contrast, a research and planning unit within the solicitor - general's department would not be one step removed. Its files would be there for the minister's perusal at any time. The minister would not have to order the unit to deliver the files to him — as he would if the unit were within the RCMP — and that's the crux of the matter because ordering the files delivered requires a positive act on the minister's part for which he can be held responsible. How can he be held responsible for examining the files of his departmental unit? That would be part of his job.

The problem lies partly in the nature of security work. It may be necessary to maintain extensive dossiers on people in sensitive positions even though there is nothing incriminating in the dossiers from a security viewpoint. But security risks are blackmail risks and so the worst has to be known just in case. But by that same token, the government is obligated to go to excessive lengths to see that this highly personal and confidential information is not misused. That's why leaving the prime responsibility with the RCMP is so important.

The classic illustration of the point we are trying to make occurred in 1966 during the Gerda Munsinger sex scandal. The commissioner of the RCMP testified before a royal commission examining the case that in November, 1964, Prime Minister Lester Pearson called him in and ordered him to deliver all files indicating wrongdoing involving any member of Parliament during the previous 10 years. The request came only a few days after the Conservatives had raised accusations in the House of improper efforts by certain Liberals to get bail for Lucien Rivard who was awaiting extradition to the United States.

PEARSON
... rebuffed



DOUGLAS
... party switched

* * *

There was a furious outcry. A motion of non-confidence in the Liberal government was brought and Mr. Pearson survived it by a vote of 133-106 only after a bloody debate during which he maintained that all he had asked for was information on other scandals comparable to the Rivard affair in which MPs might be implicated.

The point is that Mr. Pearson had to make the request and later account for it. That would not have been true if the RCMP had not been involved.

Even then, 13 New Democrats, led by Tommy Douglas, remained so outraged by the request that they voted against the government.

Now the story's different. New Democrats have become the champions — or the doormat — for the Liberals' determination to set up a research and planning unit within the solicitor - general's department.

Gone is any concern for protecting the public against misuse of information. In its place is the tawdry excuse that, really, all the unit will be doing is analysing information gathered from wherever possible.

But the collection of information without the severe safeguards imposed by the RCMP is precisely what's wrong with the plan and that's precisely why the Commons justice committee — aroused by a masterful attack by the Tories — performed a national service in rejecting it.

* * *

By voting with the government on third reading to allocate funds to the unit the NDP demonstrated that it has lost either its sense or its conscience.

And the government, by insisting on proceeding with the solicitor - general's unit even after the committee's rejection, has shown an offensive stubbornness that prevents any reading of lessons from such things as Mr. Pearson's dilemma, public reaction to police and security procedures in the months following the War Measures Act crisis in Quebec and the current Watergate affair in the United States.

ITT Bid Stupid, But Not Scandalous

By DAVE ABLETT

OTTAWA — When the case of financier Robert Vesco, part of the tangled Watergate web, broke in the U.S., it brought some joking questions here.

Vesco had given the Nixon campaign $200,000 in $100 bills packed into a suitcase. Former attorney-general John Mitchell and former commerce secretary Maurice Stans are now charged with trying to influence a securities case in which Vesco was then involved.

Anyway, the question here was this: if Vesco, who has Canadian connections, gave Nixon's men $200,000 in a suitcase, what did he donate to the Liberal party in Canada?

The answer: a new set of luggage.

Well, it now seems that this might not have been too far off the mark.

This week, the government was forced to fend off questions about whether the Liberal party had pressured International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT) in the U.S. to get ITT in Canada to reverse its decision to give no money to the Liberal campaign last fall.

●

In strictly money terms, ITT was a logical bet. The conglomerate controls some 58 companies in Canada and ITT Canada's U.S. parent has been so free with political contributions that it wound up in a pre-Watergate scandal over whether it had given Nixon $400,000 in order to get the U.S. justice department to call off the hounds gnawing at ITT over the largest merger in U.S. history (involving a $1.5 billion share exchange).

In Canada, however, ITT had a corporate policy of no campaign contributions. Apparently the Liberals, the Conservatives and the Creditistes all tried to climb onto the Canadian branch of ITT's money tree and all got the same answer: no.

One Liberal fund-raiser, however, was resourceful enough to know that the power in ITT lies not in Toronto but in the U.S. He called Washington (whether with or without party authorization is not clear). The answer was still no.

Now, there is something decidedly odd about a bagman from a party professing to recognize the danger of U.S. parents dominating Canadian subsidiaries seeking to get the U.S. parent to order the Canadian subsidiary to do something, to wit, to donate money to the Liberals.

It is just as odd that ITT would be approached for funds at the very time it was in the middle of an uproar involving an alleged ITT attempt to buy an anti-trust settlement. Subsequently, ITT's involvement with the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, its attempt to bankroll a plan for a CIA bid to keep Salvador Allende from becoming president of Chile, came to light.

●

Why the Liberals—or one of their agents — would go after money that, if donated and if disclosed, could only embarrass the party and government, is an imponderable. In politics, a buck is not a buck. It was just straight stupid.

However, as a full-blown campaign scandal, this affair lacks a certain something.

We've had campaign scandals before—John A. Macdonald's Pacific scandal, Mackenzie King's Beauharnois. And what our past scandals have had in common is that money was contributed in exchange, or apprently in exchange, for some favor that would not have been given without the contribution.

Though there is something stupid about seeking money from ITT, given its reputation, and something maladroit about trying to pressure a Canadian subsidiary through a U.S. parent, there is nothing particularly scandalous about doing this.

If anything, what is surprising is that ITT didn't — or so we are told — give any money. (It may be, of course, that ITT feels itself so well placed that it doesn't need the help of a Canadian government.)

The opposition went after the government because ITT companies had received a $1 million DREE grant and a $70 million contract to mechanize the post office. Robert Stanfield charged "harassment" of ITT. The implication is that the Liberals might have pointedly told ITT about this government cash and suggested that ITT might return the favor, but none of this is proven.

The idea of a harassed ITT boggles the mind. But NDP leader David Lewis produced an even more unusual suggestion. He asked if the government is considering a law that would require subsidiaries to ignore the political contribution policies of their U.S. parents. That is, if ITT has a U.S. policy of no corporate contributions, Canadian corporations should be able to contribute to Canadian political parties anyway.

Of course the NDP has little chance of getting an ITT contribution. It could criticize any party that did.

●

It would seem far better to bar corporate contributions entirely, particularly since the new election expenses legislation before Parliament allows tax deductions for campaign contributions. Such contributions are barred in the U.S. (though that doesn't stop the money from flowing). Hence the ITT policy of no corporate contribution.

Such an approach has been tried in Canada before. It was easily circumvented and there were no legal sanctions, so the law was withdrawn. But the U.S. law, involving as it does disclosure of political contributions, has brought a whole range of unhappy dealings to public light, including the Watergate. That was the point of the law.

One of the first breaks in that awesome scandal involved a cheque for $25,000 from a Minnesota man who, with unseemly haste, was granted a bank charter after contributing the money.

Even without the corporate contribution ban, however, the law before Parliament is far better than anything Canada has seen before.

How soon it will become law remains in question. Parliament will rise shortly for the summer and while the government says it considers passage of the campaign expenses bill highly important, it also indicates the bill may not become law before the fall.

This delay may be very important. To go again to the U.S. experience, the Republican party raised vast sums of money before the required disclosure in the U.S. law took effect on April 7, 1972.

Canada's bagmen may even now be out collecting suitcases of money. Or, at least suitcases.

The Maple Leaf Forever

By STUART GRAY

McDonald's, the giant U.S.-based hamburger chain, is expanding operations in Toronto. An outlet is opening soon on Yonge Street, and they're advertising in the papers for help.

In itself, perhaps, not a momentous event. What makes the ads notable is the altered appearance of the legendary big M in them (the McDonald's symbol, not Frank). Stuck under the middle stroke of the M is one of the nicest little maple leaves you're likely to see outside of an Information Canada logo. (It even rivals the one in the name of Maclean's Magazine.)

But it just goes to show you the power of a graphic artist. A few strokes of the pen—and McDonald's is a Canadian way of life too.

Seeing that pert little maple leaf reminded me of how business is really making the most of the current Canadian whoopdedoo feeling. I remember it used to be that when a teenager walked into a store to buy a pair of jeans, for instance, he automatically became a pacifist. Almost every factory, it seemed, used to slap a mass-produced peace symbol on a back pocket, because protests were in. Well try to find one now. Commercial pacifism has given way to commercial patriotism.

Factory-sewn maple leaves are sprouting on backsides across the nation.

That's what capitalism means. Capitalizing. If you happen to be foolish enough to hold your national symbols in some regard, I guess you could get a mite riled up over some of the ways they're being used. Take, for example, the patriotism-conscious plug Canada Packers Ltd. has been running in national magazines. At the top, a caption trumpets: Maple Leaf Forever. Under that, there's a cartoon showing a gaggle of housewives next to a flagpole. All are giving military salutes to a huge flag. It's not actually a Canadian flag. Adorning it is the Canada Packers emblem and the house brand in large letters: Maple Leaf. Get it?

It seems to me that ads used to bring in the Canadian angle without getting too loud about it. Like the one you still see now and again for good old Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry: "Follow the lead of six generations of Canadians. Reach for Fowler's Extract at the first sign of ..." At least you have a sense of heritage there.

But today even Eaton's, that venerable Canadian institution, occasionally boosts a strange brand of cash-register nationalism. I recently did a double take at a full-page newspaper ad Eaton's ran for Speedo swimsuits, "the bathing suits worn by Olympic champions." (Read here: U.S. Olympic champions. The suits are from White Stag, the U.S. garment king.) The Spitz ethos is evident in the photo of a guy on a poolside ladder who is about to haul a sweet young thing into the chlorine. The guy happens to be wearing a medal on his chest, and his Speedo swimsuit design has what I at first mistook for stars on (red, white and blue) stripes. Then I looked again. Could it be? Yup. They weren't stars and stripes, but leaves and stripes.

I don't know what the answer is. Some people already are coming up with their own. Just yesterday I saw a van in Halifax driven by some longhairs. There was a big Canadian flag painted across the front. But they'd replaced the red maple leaf with a red heart. I laughed a bit, but when I thought about it, it didn't seem such a bad idea. Maybe that heart has more meaning for them than the maple leaf McDonald's is flogging.

No Fear of Future

ership of the conservative Liberal-Democratic coalition that's run the nation for 25 years and seems likely to run it for another 25.

The Japanese believe that there are three kinds of political leader. One says, "Should a cuckoo not sing, let it be silent." The second says, "Should a cuckoo not sing, let's wait until it does." The third says, "Should a cuckoo not sing, kill it."

The latter is an exact description of 54-year-old Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, once revered as a self-made man with bold ideas, now reviled as an autocratic, impatient, aggressive ruler so given to impetuous, one-man decisions that he's known as "the computerized bulldozer."

Tanaka is taking the rap now for everything from inflation to pollution and seems destined to be replaced at the top. It will be damaging, perhaps, to the prime minister's ego, but not to his bank balance. The government operates so closely with the nation's financial hierarchy that defeated or resigned leaders instantly go into private corporations, a long-established tradition known as "parachuting."

This happy relationship between government and business is one of the wonders of Japan.

Like honey bees from a hive, swarms of civil servants in the Japan External Trade Organization go to every corner of the earth, to every trade fair and exhibition and to 75 permanent offices in major cities (four in Canada) to augment the masses of "missionaries" sent out by the companies themselves.

At home the government acts as a constant nursemaid for privately-owned industry. It offers tax incentives, for example, up to 50 per cent, for investment in foreign lands. While it has a barebones budget for welfare programs it's found $850 million available as loans for businessmen to offset profit declines caused by the revaluation of the yen. Though the giant trading companies have an unsavory reputation for land and stock speculations the government has countered only with a mild "anti-profiteering" bill that's yet to become law.

The prime minister's popularity and prestige with his own party has waned with the cancellation of Emperor Hirohito's proposed autumn visit to the United States, called off, so it's said, not by the emperor's ill-health, but because of internal disagreement within the Liberal-Democratic ranks, and by Tanaka's refusal to take a strong position on the rising costs of land, housing and consumer goods.

Meanwhile, the socialist opposition, often supported by the Communist Party, is making gains, along with the communists, in civic and municipal elections.

I happened to be in Osaka, the nation's second industrial city, when Dr. Takeko Kutsunugi, a 50-year-old woman hospital superintendent, won a by-election seat for the communists in the upper house at Tokyo where the government has a fragile majority, an event that shocked the nation.

It needn't have. When I did my own post-mortem on the affair I found that only 37 per cent of the eligible voters had turned out, always a happy occurence for a small, militant party, that Dr. Kutsunigi had just squeaked in over her Liberal-Democrat opponent and that the election had not been fought on ideological grounds, but on rising prices, land speculation and housing problems.

Neither socialists nor communists in Japan, I was to find, ever talk about takeovers or the redistribution of wealth or related left-wing policies, but win their support entirely on such current issues.

Tanaka's spokesman used the word "shocking" to describe the defeat, but back in Tokyo I found them all but smug in their estimate of the future and their ability to hold a strong majority in the lower house of the Diet.

In a nation growth rich under the most elementary form of capitalism the world has known, a nation not merely of industrial giants, but with some 650,000 small companies with 10 or more employees and 500,000 with less than 10, the threat of a genuinely socialist movement does not disturb the sleep of the free-enterprisers.

While the unions give lip service to the opposition Democratic Socialist Party, the union leaders themselves admit that no more than a quarter of the rank-and-file members vote that way. "Solidarity," one auto workers' union leader told me, "is just a dream."

Now, with the constant movement into the smog-bound cities, a movement so relentless that the forecasters say that by 1980 only 15 per cent of the entire population (as opposed to 60 per cent in the mid-forties) will be in the countryside, with 28 million workers in the factories of Tokyo, Yokahama, Osaka and Kobe, the socialist-communist leaders, hoping to take advantage of the big city frustrations, are frequently asking the question, "Do you want to become industrial robots?" The answer, to their dismay, would appear to be a qualified "yes."

My young guests were sure that "the old boys" would survive this period of political disfavor and they were equally sure that Japan's present course will remain steady.

The papers here are full of speculating commentators with a dark vision of Japan becoming a nuclear military power or heading an East Asian bloc against the West. For the visitor here, with ready access to government and business leaders, any such possibilities appear remote or nonsensical.

Talks are on at this moment for a full-fledged trade agreement between Japan and China, which resumed diplomatic ties last September, to take effect next year. An initial shipment of Chinese crude oil, said to be 200,000 tons, a drop in the bucket in Japan's annual requirement of 200 million tons, is at least an indication that the Chinese are willing to provide raw resources in exchange for Japanese technology, machinery and steel.

There's a new thrust, too, in relations with the Soviet Union, mainly in an attempt to negotiate joint development of oil and natural gas resources, a pitch that will personally involve Prime Minister Tanaka on a forthcoming visit to Moscow.

To a man, government spokesmen dismiss such manoeuvres as simply the need to diversify Japan's main sources of raw materials, particularly in the energy field where there's a crisis expected in the next decade. They say it in no way represents a drift away from the west.

There are still more than 60,000 American troops in this country and the Japanese have kept to their 1945 agreement to limit their Self-Defence Forces, now at a strength of 325,000 men, though it is, to be sure, a highly-trained militia led by an elite officer corps.

No visitor can doubt the nation's ability to develop nuclear weapons if that decision should ever be made, but it is repeated like a catechism, over and over, that the only people in the world to have felt the fury of the atom bomb want no part of nuclear fission except for peaceful power, as represented by the installation of Tokyo Electric's fifth nuclear plant.

I found my young guests remarkably sanguine, too, about the nation's problems of housing and pollution, problems that seem catastrophic to the visitor, yet are accepted by most Japanese, enjoying the sweet smell of economic success, as long term, rather than immediate, priorities.

While few believe it to be anything but a political gesture, the government's grandiose, trillion-dollar blue-print for "a new Japan" is taken, at least, as evidence that "something will be done."

The plan calls for a massive decentralizing of industry, the relocation of mills, factories and refineries from 12 designated pollution-centres, including Tokyo and Osaka, which account for almost half of Japan's industrial output. That accomplished, the government promises, there'll be room for public-financed housing projects and parks.

At the same time, rural towns with their own transplanted industries under strict environment and pollution controls will become model communities with no more than 250,000 inhabitants.

The industries that remain in their present locations, so the government warns, will face new and tougher laws protecting air, land and water from the guck that millions of Japanese have learned to live with in the industrial jungles.

Since the "new Japan" program is not scheduled to begin until 1975 the patient sufferers from smog and industrial wastes take what comfort they can in a more insidious kind of relocation.

Japan is, in fact, exporting its pollution by setting up chemical plants and refineries in Thailand, Malaysia, South Korea and Okinawa.

There's a conscious effort, as well, to phase out domestic primary processing, particularly in petroleum refining and the production of pulp and paper, in densely-populated areas, a policy that, they hope, will conserve energy and keep the pollution in those nations — Canada being one of them — that supply this mighty national machine of production

For the older Japanese these are all imponderables that cloud the future, however bright the present may seem. For the coming generation — well, as one of my slang-loving guests put it: "No sweat, no sweat at all."

(This is the last of a series of reports from Japan.)

Testimony Seals Case, Says Crown

Four Victorians, charged with conspiracy to traffic heroin, could be convicted on the basis of inferences made from their activities at the time of the alleged conspiracy, prosecutor Cecil Branson said Thursday.

Presenting his summation on the case to Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake, Branson said the court is "at liberty to draw the conclusion" that the accused were engaged in a conspiracy.

Charged are Daniel Hadden, 57; Michael Kincses, 27; Wendy Dance, 25; and Robert Langer, 30. They are also charged with possession of heroin for trafficking.

The Crown's case, said Branson, is based on direct and circumstantial evidence that there was a continuing, on-going agreement to traffic heroin "on a middle level."

He said the evidence of Linda Anderson, who was named as a co-conspirator but not charged, is "corroborated by other evidence."

He also said the evidence of Sharon Dannenberg, formerly charged with the four accused, is corroborated by the evidence of Anderson and police officers.

Anderson testified she was approached by Langer who asked if she was interested in dealing heroin. She refused the offer but later went to Kincses, whom she knew through Langer, and asked if she "could deal for him."

Before she went to Kincses she spoke to Langer who said "it had to go through Mike."

Branson said the negotiations were "evidence of a connection" between Langer and Kincses.

Anderson also testified that Kincses took her to a unit at the Fort Victoria Motel, 341 Island Highway. She sold heroin, supplied by Kincses, from there for a week.

Several people, including Kincses and Langer, she testified, went in and out of the unit.

That evidence, said Branson, is corroborated by the testimony of narcotics officers who staked out the unit for three days in September.

In a 2½-hour address to the judge, Robert Price, defending Kincses and Dance, said, "The Crown's contentions are mainly based here on associations, not evidence.

"What the Crown has to show here is a common criminal agreement . . . a knowing adoption of the common plan."

The Crown's suggestion "that this is some kind of intricate pyramid" is "utter nonsense," he said, "There is no sharing here of profits . . . There is no head man . . ."

Every transaction described by the Crown was a case of each individual functioning on his own, said Price.

Dance met Langer and Kincses for the first time on Oct. 26, the day she was arrested, he said, so there was obviously no conspiracy between Dance and Langer or Dance and Kincses.

Branson had said it is difficult to prove a conspiracy by direct evidence but the court may draw certain conclusions, said Price, but that "doesn't mean you can take a lot of irrelevant, weightless pieces of evidence" and call it a conspiracy.

Dorothy Fetterley, representing Hadden, said much of the Crown's evidence was "facts put together to make nothing out of nothing."

5 TICKETS FROM B.C.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Five B.C. residents, none from Vancouver Island, hold tickets in the 11-horse Manitoba Derby sweepstakes.

The race will be run here Sunday.

For the first time, the Lotteries Commission announced, three ticket holders from outside North America were drawn among the 100 consolation prize winners, who get $300 each. The three are residents of Japan, Jamaica and Hawaii.

Early Trails Reproduced

OTTAWA (CP) — A map of RCMP posts and patrol routes existing in the west during 1888 has been issued by the energy, mines and resources department.

The map, part of the RCMP centennial celebrations, is copied from one produced by the Northwest Mounted Police in the late 1800s. It also shows railway and communication links.

It is available through the mapping branch of the federal department at a cost of $2.

COCKE VOWS PSYCHOSURGERY END

Health Minister Dennis Cocke has promised to do all he can to end psychosurgery on mental patients in British Columbia, a spokesman for the Committee on Institutional Psychiatry said Thursday after a meeting with the minister.

Robert Dobson-Smith of Toronto said he presented Cocke with a proposed amendment to the Mental Health Act which would ban all such operations, which are used to control emotions or modify behavior that psychiatrists consider "unacceptable or anti-social."

Quoting statistics from the government's B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, Dobson-Smith said 40 operations involving psychosurgery were performed in the province last year, mostly at Vancouver General hospital. Another 18 related operations were also carried out.

Cocke told him that he is "violently opposed" to psychosurgery, said Dobson-Smith, research co-ordinator for the committee, a four-year-old organization which is dedicated to publicizing both the pros and cons of psychiatry.

"He hates the stuff," said Dobson-Smith of the health minister. Cocke promised to discuss the proposed amendement with the full cabinet and push for an end to all psychosurgery in the province, he added.

Such operations are estimated to fail 80 per cent of the time, he said.

"It's a totally inexact science. It's a one-in-five shot in the dark and who in hell can make a decision like that?"

The committee is also working to have psychosurgery outlawed in the rest of Canada, and most of its work is concentrated in B.C., Ontario and Quebec, where most psychosurgery is performed. He pointed out as well that a court decision in Detroit Wednesday banned experimental psychosurgery on any state mental patient.

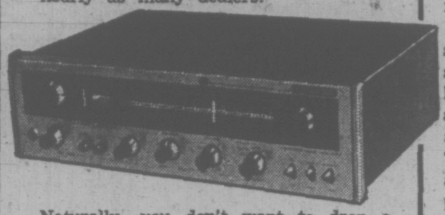
IF YOU'VE NEVER OWNED A STEREO,... YOU NEED ALL THE HELP YOU CAN GET!

Now that you have decided to buy a Component Stereo, you could be in for a lot of work. There are literally hundreds of stereos to choose from and nearly as many dealers.



Naturally, you don't want to drop a bundle on your new stereo, but going too cheap may cause you a lot of dissatisfaction. The TOSHIBA SA400 is our most popular stereo receiver simply because it offers more of what people need, (like power, FM sensitivity, freedom from distortion and of course, a deluxe wood grain cabinet) for less of what people have (like money). In fact, this $309.95 (List) Receiver sells for only $229.95 at Young's right now!

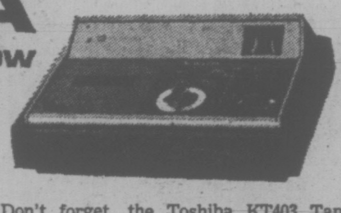
But, there is more to a stereo than just a great receiver, and this is where we come in. We make it easy to get the right stereo for your needs and budget by having a knowledgeable trained sales staff to answer questions and demonstrate the equipment. We do not use high presure selling tactics. We stock a full range of world renowned speakers and turntables, such as KLH, ALTEC, TANDBERG, SAE, PIONEER, DUAL and P.E. We also offer the most comprehensive guarantee on the island . . . 5 years! We can arrange easy credit terms too.

Right now we can offer you our best "First Stereo" ever. A Toshiba SA400 Receiver, 2 KLH Model 17 Loudspeakers and a P.E. 3012 Changer. (A $675 value.) ONLY $499.95

But hurry, we only have a limited number left at this low price.

TOSHIBA
In Touch with Tomorrow

It offers a full 30 Watts RMS which is ample to run nearly all medium to high efficiency quality loudspeakers, and it has all the features you need, such as click-stopped bass and treble controls, variable hinge points, (Come in for a demonstration — this one's harder to explain than to use), a tape monitor switch, so you can add a cassette or 8-track recorder and more. The FM dial is backlit for better visability and has a strength meter for easier tuning.



Don't forget, the Toshiba KT403 Tape Cassette Deck adds a new world of music to any stereo ONLY $119.95

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybeans and soybean meal future advanced the limit allowed for one session on the Board of Trade Friday.

A 10-cent limit move in the corn pit early in the session was trimmed by profit-taking. Wheat futures, up 8½ cents early, closed some seven cents higher. Oats advanced around two cents.

Soybean oil prices were up from 30 points.

The demand for soybeans, meal, corn and wheat was strong from the opening and after the limit had been touched trade slowed to a virtual standstill.

Several times, however, prices moved off the limits in very thin trade, but returned to the top again.

At the close, soybeans were up the limit of 40 cents in all options except the expiring July which ended up at its limit, 80 cents, and 8.67. Corn was up nine cents, July 2.42. Wheat was up a cent, July 2.89 and oats were up around 2 cents, July new 96 cents.

OLD TIRES TESTED FOR BUILDING ROADS

REGINA (CP) — The provincial highways department is conducting a study to determine the value of using discarded rubber tires in highway construction, spokesman Bill Culley of the department said.

Full-scale field tests will be initiated by next June involving about one mile of pavement.

Some American states, including Arizona, already are using ground-up tires in tests, but the extreme temperature changes here, ranging from about 50 below in the winter to about 100 above in the summer, could create problems.

"The environment here kills several good ideas."

If effective, the plan could help avert cracking in asphalt, he said. Discarded auto, truck and tractor tires would be mixed with components of asphalt to as much as 30 per cent.

Seattle Third In Containers

SEATTLE (AP) — This city has moved to the No. 3 position as a container port in the U.S. and sixth in the world, according to rankings released by the "Containerization International Yearbook," a London publication.

Nationwide, Seattle ranks behind New York and Oakland, Calif., with a comfortable lead over Baltimore, Md., and Los Angeles. Internationally, Seattle sits behind London and ahead of such trading ports as Belfast, Yokohama and Antwerp.

NEW YORK

$ EXCHANGE

In Victoria today, purchase of U.S. funds in terms of Canadian dollar was .9925 by the Royal Bank at .9915 cheques, and .9815 silver. Selling rates were 1.0035 for cheques and 1.0040 for cash.

MONTREAL (CP)—U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds at noon Friday was up 1-50 at $0.99 43-50. Pound sterling down 11-100 at $2.53 89-100.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was down 1-50 at $1.00 7-50. Pound sterling down 3-20 at $2.54¼.

Prices Stay Lower In TSE Trading

Prices at Toronto remained lower in moderate mid-afternoon trading today.

Bank, industrial mining, chemical and merchandising stocks were among sectors of the market recording declines while construction and material, oil refining, real estate and utility issues were higher.

Falconbridge Nickel fell 1⅛ to $74⅞, Royal Bank ⅝ to $34, Noranda ⅝ to $53⅝, White Pass and Yukon ½ to $11¾ and Travelways ½ to $5¼.

Walker-Gooderham rose ⅞ to $53, Banister ¾ to $22⅞, Na-Churs ⅝ to $7⅛, Cominco ½ to $31¾ and Bell Canada ¼ to $42⅝.

Falconbridge Copper lost ½ to $13¼, Mindamar Energy 35 cents to $4.95 and Bethlehem ¼ to $16. Mattagami gained ⅝ to $34½ and Tara ⅜ to $15¾.

Pennant-Puma was off 30 cents to $2.90 and Chieftain 20 cents to $9.75. Canadian Superior was up ⅞ to $52.

New York

Prices slid lower in moderate trading at New York and brokers said it reflected investor uncertainties.

Analysts attributed the declines to renewed weakness of the dollar abroad after a strong showing in the first three days of the business week, as well as to President Nixon's illness linked to economic uncertainties.

United aircraft, down 1½ at 28¼, was the New York Stock Exchange's volume leader, followed by U.S. Leasing, down ⅝ at 16¾; Texaco, down ⅝ at 31⅞; American Telephone, down ¼ at 51⅝; and Exxon down 1 at 93⅞.

Just as the three-day rally which ended Wednesday reflected a wide-spectrum of stocks, today's lower prices also were broad based.

Hudson General, down ⅜ at 2¾, was the American Stock Exchange volume leader.

The NYSE broad-based index of some 1,500 common stocks was down 0.42 at 55.38. The Amex price-change index was down .01 at 22.64.

Montreal

Prices were mixed in light trading at Montreal.

On the Montreal Stock Exchange, Walker-Gooderham and Worts gained 1 to $52¾, Union Oil ¾ to $15¼ and Trans-Canada Pipe Lines ⅝ to $32½ while Reader's Digest declined 1¼ to $20 and Canadian National Bank ½ to $16½.

On the Canadian Stock Exchange, Dominion Leaseholds rose four cents to eight cent on 59,500 shares trades.

London

Prices at London were higher in light trading.

Observers said leading industrial issues firmed following release of figures showng a narrower trade deficit in June.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrial stocks closed at 437.1, up 3.1.

Canadian issues were generally mixed.

Construction Pace Brisk But Scarcely Spectacular

MID-YEAR REPORT

Construction continues to be brisk at mid-year in British Columbia, although the pace is not spectacular.

A lack of major new projects in the resource industries is the major weakness.

Heavy spending on power projects is taking up some of the slack.

In addition, commercial and residential construction is strong in major population centres.

Victoria, Vancouver, Kamloops and Prince George are especially active and in all four centres there is a shortage of tradesmen in some crafts.

Over-all, the employment level in the building trades is very high throughout the province, contributing to the brightest job picture in 18 months.

As of May there was a total of 946,000 people at work across the province as unemployment was 6.2 per cent, compared with 8 per cent the previous May.

Total capital and repair spending in B.C. seemed likely to reach the forecast of just under $2.6 billion in 1973, up 3 per cent over 1972.

Construction spending in the resources industries would total $367 million, down from $379.3 million in 1972.

Meanwhile, development of the Kootenay Canal hydro project and other dam expansion would push construction in the utility sector to $526.3 million, up from $443.9 million in 1972.

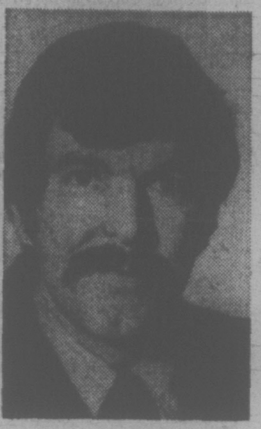
Housing construction would be worth $831.3 million this year, up from $826.3 million in 1972 and governments would pump about $563.2 million into the economy in institutional and department construction work, up from $547.5 million in 1972.

Wayne Farmer, president of the British Columbia Construction Association, said it might be two more years before major new capacity was needed in the forestry industry, although some existing plants would be expanded.

This lack of major projects in sawmills and pulp mills would hold the construction growth rate to a rather meagre 2 to 3 per cent annually until 1975.

However, construction would continue to be brisk in light industrial and commercial areas.

Demand will also keep residential contractors busy.



FARMER
. . . two more years.

Farmer said the B.C. Construction Association has made some progress in getting the provincial government to schedule institutional contracts when work in the private sector is at a low ebb.

Careful scheduling meant that workers would be available and materials would not be in short supply and costly.

This type of planning was of benefit both to the industry and to the government in terms of efficienty and lower costs, Farmer said.

Provincial departments cooperating with the association on scheduling are public works, department of education and to some extent the department of health and welfare, including hospitals.

"Although it is difficult to predict any control of the release of projects to coincide with the humps and hollows of the construction industry, we are confident that the present communication that we enjoy with these departments will cause a measure of improvement," Farmer said.

The labor picture for the last half of 1973 looks bright in comparative terms.

Two strikes hampered construction in the first half: the walkout of elevator installation workers and a 32-month strike by workers in the reinforcing steel rod industry. The latter strike was settled at the end of June.

The only strike currently under way is by a small group of workers installing heating and air conditioning units. A prolonged strike could hamper or halt many projects.

Meanwhile, contractors are organizing their projects in hopes of completing major work before the end of April, 1974, when major contracts expire in the construction industry.

A spring walkout would involve upwards of 40,000 workers.

"Historically, within the last six years, this point in time has resulted in a major disruption of work within the construction industry and the major purchasers are greatly concerned," Farmer said.

"Unless we can somehow convince the purchasers that both the unions and management are going to be responsible during the next negotiations and that there will not be a confrontation, we are heading for a great slump in the construction industry during the spring and summer of 1974."

Norway Tips U.S. Firm As Oil Boss

OSLO (AP) — The Norwegian government today appointed the American Mobil Oil Co. operator for an international group to exploit oil and gas resources in the Norwegian part of the Brent Field in the North Sea.

An announcement by the ministry of industries said the state-owned Norwegian oil company Statoil has obtained a 50-per-cent interest in the two Brent field blocks on Norway's continental shelf and that negotiations are going on with Mobil, Esso, Shell, Conoco and the Saga-Amoco group on their part in the venture.

The minister said details of the agreement with the companies remained to be negotiated.

Ambulance Offer

QUESNEL (CP) — A para-medic from San Francisco has come to the aid of this Cariboo town of 6,300 by offering to temporarily operate a free ambulance service.

Quesnel has been without ambulance service since Tuesday when Harold Henigar terminated operation of his business claiming he could not continue unless he received a $1,000 a month subsidy.

Mayor Ceal Tingley said that Michael Stanley and his wife will run the service out of a local motel until the town has some firm arrangement with someone else.

Mayor Tingley said a "guy walked into the town office and offered to operate an ambulance free while the town is in this bind."

Stanley, 26, said he spent four years in the United States navy as a para-medic, including a year in South Vietnam where he spent part of the time in the field as the only medical personnal for a 180-man marine company.

Even though Stanley offered to handle the service without renumeration, the mayor said the town will pay him normal wages on a day-to-day basis, and has rented and equipped a van with first-aid supplies to serve as an ambulance.

PUPPY FACTORIES SLAMMED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A large number of quick-buck puppy mills are operating illegally in the Greater Vancouver area, a pet society official reported Thursday at a meeting of City Council's environment committee.

Anna Mumford, Canadian adviser to the Animal Protection Institute of America, said the puppy factories house a dozen or more bitches which are bred every time they come into heat. They operate without kennel licences largely because they can't meet kennel standards and contravene municipal regulations in the area limiting the number of dogs in a unlicensed premises to three or four dogs.

The bitches become overworked after a few years of constantly producing litters and begin to have miscarriages and other complications. When this happened, their owners simply got rid of them.

She found the puppy factories by posing as a buyer after noticing the constance recurrance of the same telephone numbers in newspaper pet columns and realizing that the legal number of bitches couldn't produce litters so frequently, she said.

In an interview later she said the operators of the puppy factories sell mongrels for about $10 to $15 while a purebred poodle without papers might go for $25. Cost of a registered poodle from a licensed kennel is $150 and up.

NDP Choice

KELOWNA (CP) — Bryan McIvor, an unsuccessful candidate in last year's federal election, was nominated Thursday night to contest the Okanagan South provincial byelection for the New Democratic party.

The seat was held by former premier W. A. C. Bennett who resigned earlier this year.

No date has been set for the byelection, but McIvor told supporters to "keep your enthusiasm for 60 days." His nomination was not contested.,

McIvor has been an NDP organizer for four years. B.C. Conservative leader Derril Warren will contest the byelection for the Tories. Bill Bennett, son of the former premier, is expected to win the Social Credit nomination. No Liberal standard-bearer has yet been named.

Cominco Second To Hike Zinc Tab

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cominco Ltd. announced Thursday that its base price for zinc in world markets other than Canada and the United States will be increased to 220 pounds per metric ton effective today.

The increase of 15 pounds per metric ton followed on the heels of a similar increase announced Thursday by Noranda Sales Corp. Ltd.

The Cominco announcement gave no reason for the increase but a Noranda spokesman in Toronto said the increase follows price changes by continental European zinc producers and reflects an adjustment due to changes in the value of the British pound relative to other European currencies.

The pound sterling is worth $2.54 in Canadian funds based on Thursday's rate.

Grit Soul-Searching On

VANCOUVER (CP) — Western Liberals tonight begin a critical examination of themselves, under the umbrella of "Western alienation," hoping to rebuild the party's fortunes west of the Ontario border.

The Liberal Conference on Western Objectives is billed as "part of the listening process in understanding the message last Oct. 30"—when only seven of 68 Western seats were won by federal Liberal candidates—and it is also a prelude to a Calgary conference on Western economic opportunities.

But with the Calgary conference looming, when Prime Minister Trudeau will face four premiers from opposing political camps, sources doubt whether the 160 delegates here will create any divisions with in the party.

And Trudeau is not expected to ruffle any feathers.

By taking part in the "listening process," say officials, "he will be maintaining an extremely low profile."

He has declined invitations to take part in other public activities while here.

Justice Minister Otto Lang, is optimistic about the three day meeting.

"For the first time, Western Liberals are developing a more fundamental approach to the real problems. There is a general realization that patch-work solutions are not the answer.

"And the important thing is the ability of the prime minister to understand the fundamentals of an argument."

This meeting of Western Liberals is the fourth held prior to national policy conferences—the next is in Ottawa in the fall—and the fact that it is coming just before the Calgary meeting between Trudeau and the Western premiers is somewhat coincidental.

But the subject matter will clearly overlap.

Both meetings will deal with freight rates, tariffs, agriculture problems, transportation, economic development and other long-standing Western complaints.

Trudeau's research staff has produced detailed background papers—to support new federal proposals for the Calgary conference—which are unlikely to be revealed in detail here.

Federal ministers hope the tone of the meetings here will enable the prime minister to listen to the various viewpoints without getting into detailed discussions.

THE END FOR AN OLD HOME

Victoria city council voted Thursday to permit the demolition of a 90-year-old house — described as part of the city's architectural heritage — to make way for a four-storey frame apartment building at Fernwood and Pandora.

Only Ald. Sam Bawlf and Ald. Malcolm Anderson voted against the bylaw to rezone three lots to allow Vista Homes Ltd., 801 Esquimalt Road, to build the 62-unit apartment building.

There are four homes on the site. One of them, at 1507 Fernwood, was built in 1882.

Garth Mayhew, 1413 Fernwood, who spoke against the rezoning at an earlier hearing, said the home had historical value of its own, and as part of a group of "heritage homes" in the area.

Mayhew, who made a personal submission as well as one on behalf of the Hallmark Society, said alternatives could be found, using a land-use contract, to permit the contruction of an economical apartment complex on adjacent property without destroying the historical architecture at 1507 Fernwood.

"I wish the city would get down and decide what buildings are going to be set aside for their heritage value — if any — so that this won't always be coming up," Mayhew said.

Meritage buildings are "being threatened piecemeal," he said, "and this is a waste of time having to come down here and protest each time."

Ald. Bawlf described the area as being one of the few with a "cluster of heritage homes" which enhances the esthetic worth of the individual buildings.

The homes are listed in the preliminary inventory of historically and architecturally significant buildings — he called it the "11th Hour List" — which Bawlf is preparing to submit to council.

Ald. Mike Young, chairman of the city's planning committee, defended demolition of the old home because "the outlook in that area is not particularly salubrious."

Mayor Peter Pollen, who as chairman did not vote, described the bylaw as "spot zoning."

"If we are going to encourage and condone spot zoning, naturally builders are going to be inclined to move in on old homes like these," he said.

$300 a Day 'Unbelievable'

The latest round of government salary increases, specifically the $300-a-day salary to be paid new Liquor Board chairman Neil Davidson, drew a stinging attack Thursday from Social Credit party spokesman James Chabot (SC —Columbia River).

"It's ridiculous, $300 a day is just unrealistic, it's unbelievable," Chabot said from his home in Invermere. "The government is attempting to justify the premier and the cabinet's increase in salary."

Chabot said the private sector and the federal government are not paying the levels of salaries which are being offered to people working for the provincial government.

The Socred MLA, considered to be contestant for the Social Credit party leadership at the party's convention in November, also blasted the increase in salary given to John Wood, Premier Dave Barrett's executive assistant.

Chabot said Wood was being paid about $13,500 when he was assistant to the Leader of the Opposition and got a boost to $22,000 when Barrett became premier.

Another increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1973, came through last month and hiked Wood's income to $27,000 per year.

"The retroactive payment is an insult," Chabot said. "It gives him a virtual windfall. The government is throwing money around loosely."

With the cost of living increasing, workers are seeing their government making giveaways to its employees, he said.

Region Rents Parking From City

With Ald. Percy Frampton objecting to the "subsidization of the regional district", city council voted Thursday to lease a parking lot to the Capital Regional District at Wharf and Johnson.

The 10-year lease for $100 a month is "not a bad deal", said Mayor Peter Pollen who noted that the city has encouraged the regional district to locate its office in the city.

BIG WEAPON for Seattle's George Jonson in Pacific Northwest Golf Association tournament has been graphite-shafted driver, which helped him to two victories Thursday and berth in today's semi-final round at Uplands course. (Irving Strickland photo)

Lefty Takes Toughest Route

By DOUG PEDEN

Times Sports Editor

Leave it to a lefty to take the toughest route.

Bob Beauchemin, the 19-year-old "wrongsider" from Victoria's Gorge Vale course, did just that at the Uplands layout Thursday afternoon as he joined a charge by collegians into the semi-final round of the Pacific Northwest Golf Association championship tournament.

In early trouble against hard-hitting Mark Braman, Beauchemin had to make a comeback run along the perilous birdie trail in order to sideline his stocky Portland rival on an extra hole.

His well-executed par on the 422-yard 19th hole nailed down the triumph that sent Beauchemin, who has completed his freshman year in business administration at the University of Oregon, into today's 36-hole semi-finals against Jeff Ellis, 20, a Brigham Young University junior from Oak Harbor, Wash.

Starting out at 8 this morning in other semi-final were Victoria's Dave Mick, a second-year dentistry student at the University of B.C., and George Jonson, a 27-year-old blond belter from Seattle who needs only a few credits to complete his accounting course at Seattle University.

Like Beauchemin a Gorge Vale member and former Victoria City junior champion, Mick cruised to a 6-and-5 triumph over Portland's Brent Murray in the second round of match play Thursday morning and then was forced to avoid mistakes in the afternoon journey around the Uplands fairways on the way to a 2-up decision over Dan Elliott, the Oregon State amateur king from Portland.

Ellis, who had nipped Robert Jacobs, the Everett., Wash., dentist, on the 18th green in the morning, was almost a model of consistency after lunch. His one slip came on the third hole, where he slapped his tee shot onto Cadboro Bay Road. The slender stylist chalked up pars on the other 15 holes he needed to take out Bellingham's Jeff Kline by a 3-and-2 count.

Jonson, running into a tiger in the morning and barely escaping with a 1-up, come-from-behind victory against Mike Stoll of Portland, had a more comfortable afternoon trip when he caught Mike Gray off form on his home course and blasted out a 5-and-3 victory.

Gray, a 1-up winner over the tough West Campbell of Yakima in the morning, perhaps had a hint of troubles to come when Jonson birdied the first hole, and was 3-up after three.

It was still the same margin after 12 and then the roof fell in on Gray.

Jonson, "about two over par" in both Thursday matches, lashed one of his prodigious drives pin-high to the right of the green on the 291-yard 13th.

He settled for a par but won that hole and wrapped it up on the dog-leg, par-five 15th when Gray, still in trouble after two shots, conceded after Jonson had ripped his second to back fringe of the green.

Around par figures for his three match-play rounds on the par-70 course, Mick was never quite able to take charge against Elliott until the final hole.

Trailing by one after winning the ninth, Elliott pulled even with a birdie on 13. Mick replied with birds on the next two holes but bogeyed the 17th to start the 410-yard 18th with a 1-up advantage.

Putting his first two shots in trees, hitting his third over the green and chipping short, Elliott conceded with Mick needing a five-foot putt for a par four.

Most spectacular heroics of the quarter-finals however were served up by Beauchemin, who fired a three-under-par 32 on the back nine to earn his extra-hole chance against Braman.

Few would have wagered a farthing on Bob's chances after he had cracked his tee shot out of bounds on the third hole and picked up a bogey at six to go three down. He chipped in a 60-footer for an eagle on the par-five seventh, but was again three holes in arrears after losing to Braman's par on the ninth.

Birdies on the 13th and 15th greens along with a string of pars left the southpaw with a one-hole deficit starting the 18th, where he laced a great second shot seven feet from the flag.

He shrugged off pressure to drop the birdie putt.

On the 19th, he drilled his drive down the fairway and then watched Braman pull a 260-yard tee shot into trees.

Beauchemin lofted his second onto the front portion of the green before Braman punched a superb shot under branches only to see the ball run over the back of the green, about 35 feet from the cup.

After Beauchemin rolled a putt to within 10 inches of the hole, Braman's attempted soft pitch with a sand wedge caught the fringe, leaving him with about a 17-foot putt.

He missed that one and it was all over when Beauchemin made the tap-in par.

"What can I say?" commented Beachemin on his way back to the clubhouse. "I feel very fortunate to beat him. He's a fine golfer."

Rounds in the 36-hole men's final Saturday are slated to start at 8 a.m. and around noon with finalists in the women's section following about eight minutes later.

Little League: Some Dates to Remember

Wilf Cain can't understand why everybody didn't know it already. But lest there be a slip-up, he called the flock to lunch last week. He wanted the media to be sure to know.

It was writ here once that "Wilf Cain is Vancouver Island's best-known administrator of Little League baseball." That was in 1969. Things haven't changed.

The Canadian championships were being held here then. Wilf was in charge. The Dominion meet is here again next month (Aug. 13-18). Wilf is still the chief. Thus the lunch.

So what's a title event for 12-year-olds? Some people don't like baseball even. And heavens, Little League won't let girls play! Wilf will listen to any criticism, give his views and then get on with the game.

After all, he's a Godfather of Little League, an international vice-president and father confessor. Besides, if you didn't know it, this is also the 20th anniversary of Little League baseball in town.

Wilf is not a complicated man. He is simply a crusader for sport. It's been his life, even when he was an executive with B.C. Tel.

His preachment was involvement. It still is. He played most sports as a young man, was president of the Vancouver Island Basketball Association for 10 years, was two years B.C. president; then he took a holiday.

That was in 1955.

Not Many Have Been Spoiled

That vacation from sport lasted a year. It was his last. Sonny Bruce of Duncan tagged him as a helper. Kids should have a better place to play than a dust bowl with blocks of wood for bases; Jim Nichol of Victoria gave him a book: "This is Little League;" Wilf and a cab-driver friend sold $10 memberships; they raised $3,000; had a Little League park and Wilf was hooked for all time.

Of course, Victoria had Little League before that. The Jaycees and the Colonist were the prime movers of the game in 1953. Then there were four teams. Now there are hundreds of players in the city and thousands of grads. Little League hasn't spoiled many of them.

No man has had more impact on the game in that time, however, than Wilf Cain — here and across Canada. His legacy to Little League will never be published in full. Practicing patriots of something they believe in don't get that kind of recognition.

Wilf is retired now. But he still thinks Little League, youngsters, and his home in about that order. A few years ago, he even started mini-basketball for something else to do in the winter. Idle moments wearied him.

There have been two previous Canadian championships here, 1966 and 1969. Both were successful and played at Hampton Park. This year the action will be at Lambrick. That's the new sports complex in Saanich, and Wilf even had a hand in deciding where the Little League park might fit in there through his association with the Greater Victoria Baseball Association.

Of Bubble Gum and Grape Juice

Certainly Wilf didn't do it alone. He had his helpers, many of them — mothers, fathers, relatives, or just friends of kids. Even in Farm League. That's the grade below Little League, you know: snotty-nosed little brats, adored by doting mothers who never could believe that little Johnny had indeed missed a practice; an English lad who once ran to third base instead of first because he hadn't been told differently; or the first baseman who waved to his sweetie while the ball from the shortstop sailed across first base and the winning run sailed across the plate. That's Little League, Farm League, involvement, and bubble gum and grape juice all over the seat.

It's an experience. Many have been through it. Perhaps never again. And maybe some believe that 10 to 12-year-olds shouldn't throw curve balls, whici they do.

These are random thoughts, some reminiscences at lunch.

Besides, this year, Victoria gets a free ride into the Canadian final. That's a first and it helps the odds on a possible trip to Williamsport and the Little League World Series.

People? Wilf shouldn't be worried. If everyone who has been associated with Little League in the past 20 years shows up at Lambrick, there won't be room for anyone else anyway.

Right Wilf?

Juniors Don't Rate Fuss at Clarkston

By BILL WALKER

Times Staff

If people from the outer world don't casually drop in on Clarkston, Wash., it does have a golf and country club even if it doesn't have a championship for junior girls.

Clarkston? Oh, that's somewhere between here and there, but more specifically on the Washington-Idaho border, south of Spokane and across a bridge from Lewiston.

It also happens to be the home of 17-year-old Robin Walton, who attends high school where else but at Clarkston High where she will be a senior this fall.

Miss Walton is here for the Pacific Northwest Golf Association championships by special invitation, because she is a junior. That's the only way juniors can get to play; and the reason for the invitation is that Miss Walton is this year's PNGA junior champion.

She also just happens to be the Oregon State junior champion, and if that record isn't convincing enough, Miss Walton went to the finals of the Oregon ladies' championship this year before losing to Mary Budke of Dayton, Ore., the 1972 U.S. Amateur champion and also a PNGA contestant here.

Matter of fact, she might have won the PNGA junior title earlier if it hadn't been for the same Miss Budke.

"I lost to her, 5 and 4," said Miss Walton. "In the Oregon State final, over 36 holes, I lost 6 and 4."

Thursday at Victoria Club, Miss Walton served notice she deserves another chance at Miss Budke by defeating Connie Guthrie of Spokane at the 20th hole in quarterfinal play.

In other matches, Miss Budke defeated Judy Hoetmer, a two-time former champion, 2 and 1, by coming from behind a one-hole deficit at the 14th with successive birdies on 15 and 16 and a par on 17 when Miss Hoetmer three-putted; Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver won four of the last five holes climaxed by a birdie two on 14 to defeat Electra Koeniger of Aberdeen, 5 and 4 and Dale Shaw of Glen Meadows was carried to the 17th before eliminating Ann Swanson of Seattle, 2 and 1. Miss Shaw was two down after two holes but finally broke the match open by winning the 12th, 14th and 15th.

However, nearly all the drama was reserved for tre Walton-Guthrie confrontation, and there were some fine clutch putts too.

It was a see-saw battle from the ninth where Miss Walton was one up. Mrs. Guthrie won the 10th in par and the 12th when Miss Walton took a bogey six to take the lead for the first time. Then Miss Walton birdied 13 to get even only to fall behind again with a bogey on 14.

Then came the pressure bit. Miss Walton birdied 15 to square the match and both ladies put their seconds about 3½ feet from the pin. Both got birdies. On 17, Miss Walton lipped out for what would have been a birdie four, and on the 18th, Mrs. Guthrie had a similar misfortune from 20 feet for an eagle. As it was, Miss Walton, who had caught a trap with her second shot, had to knock in a seven-foot putt for a birdie four to stay even and force extra holes.

After par fives on the 19th, Mrs. Guthrie chipped short on the 20th after being on the apron with her tee shot and Miss Walton won with a par three.

It was a fine finish, Mrs. Guthrie being two under from 10 through 19 and Miss Walton three under for the last eight holes.

Today Miss Walton was matched against Miss Shaw and Miss Dudke against Miss Palmer.

This possibly won't create much of a stir in Clarkston. Because as Miss Walton said:

"No, I haven't won much around home. We don't have a club championship for girls. They don't take that much interest in juniors."

Perhaps they should.

PUNCHER SUSPENDED AT GAMES

TEL AVIV (AP) — The chief of the American contingent in the Maccabiah Games Thursday suspended one of his team doctors who bloodied the nose of an Israeli sports federation leader.

Nat Holman accepted an Israeli request that Dr. Max Novich be suspended until the Maccabiahs' court of honor, the supreme authority over the Games, could rule on the incident.

Novich, a former boxer, struck Samuel Lalkin during an argument over Wednesday night's boxing competition between American heavyweight Peter Brodsky and Israeli Haim Zilberschmidt. The Israeli knocked out Brodsky.

GRIZZLIES COME DOWN ... GOLF SCORES GO UP

KITIMAT (CP) — Seven grizzly bears have taken up residence on a golf course at Kemano, 50 miles south of here, and act as if they mean to stay.

The bears came down from the mountains to feed on a nearby garbage dump and are giving golfers a bad case of the jitters.

Conservation officer Gerry Smythe says the bears have come down from the mountains because of a late spring which left alpine meadows covered with snow.

So far the bears have done no damage, but golf scores have gone up.

Miller, Yancey Gain As Weiskopf Falters

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Johnny Miller and Bert Yancey jumped into a tie for the lead with faltering Tom Weiskopf today early in the third round of the British Open golf championship.

Weiskopf, who started the day at 135, nine under par and three shots ahead of Miller and Yancey, teed off in a pelting rain and then bogeyed the first and third holes to drop back to seven under.

Meanwhile, Miller birdied the third hole and Yancey birdied the second and third after taking a bogey on the first.

Jack Nicklaus, five under and fourth after the second round, went six under with a birdie at No. 2 but then bogeyed to drop back to five under.

TOM WEISKOPF . . . squanders lead.

Arnold Palmer, who won the British Open here with a record 12-under-par 276 in 1962, fired a two-under par 70 over the 7,064-yard course at the Troon Golf Club and shared the early lead in the clubhouse at 218 with Hugh Baiocchi of South Africa. Baiocchi shot a third-round 69.

Lee Trevino, the winner of the last two British Opens, took three bogeys in a string of four holes on the back nine to finish with a 73 for 221.

Weiskopf birdied the par-three, 210-yard fifth hole to go back into the lead at eight under. But Miller regained a tie for the lead with a birdie four on the 557-yard sixth.

Nicklaus dropped to four under when he bogeyed the sixth.

Weiskopf appeared to take charge of this year's tournament after firing his 67 Thursday to go with an opening-round 68.

Miller had a 68 Thursday before a drizzling rain fell from grey Scottish skies and dampened the rest of the leaders. Yancey ran in a 20-foot birdie putt on the final hole for a second 69.

Bell's, Century Pad Win Streaks

Century Inn, aided by three opposition errors, squeezed four runs out of a solitary single in the fifth inning en route to a 5-0 shutout over Royal Oak Sporting Goods in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game Thursday evening at Heywood Avenue Park.

In a second game, Bell's Men's Wear topped Six Mile House 5-3 at Central Park.

It was the 19th win in 21 starts for leading Century and the second successive shutout for pitcher Bill Polz, who recorded a two-hitter.

Bob Custance provided the other Century run by leading off the seventh inning with a solo homer.

John Hughes, who tagged the fifth-inning single, finished the evening with two hits in three trips to the plate and scored once.

Frank Doherty of Bells and Rick Whetter of Six Mile each hit two-out solo homers in the other encounter.

It was the fourth straight victory for Century and fifth straight for Bell's.

Mira Bounces Off Bench To Help Als Trip Stamps

MONTREAL (CP) — Quarterback George Mira came off the bench in the second half to throw a 34-yard touchdown pass and score one himself on a five-yard run to lead Montreal Alouettes to a 21-10 victory over Calgary Stampeders in a Canadian Football League exhibition game Thursday night.

Mira watched from the bench in the first half as the Als' offence sputtered under quarterback Sonny Wade.

Mira had his problems moving the club early in the third quarter but found John Harvey all alone in the end zone on the final play. It came 41 seconds after Fritz Seyferth caught Jerry Keeling's 34-yard pass to put Calgary ahead for the first time in the game.

The Alouettes led 7-0 at the end of the first quarter as Gene Gaines intercepted a Keeling toss on the opening play from scrimmage and ran it in from 38 yards out. Don Sweet kicked his first of three converts.

The Stampeders got three points in the second quarter on Larry Robinson's field goal. Robinson also converted Seyferth's TD.

A crowd of 12,731 watched Montreal post its second win in three pre-season games. Montreal closes out its pre-season schedule here next Thursday against Ottawa Rough Riders.

The Stamps meet Edmonton Eskimos in Edmonton next Wednesday before closing out their exhibition schedule July 24 in Calgary against Toronto Argonauts.

'Old Crocks' Tennis

COWICHAN BAY — Many entries have already been received for the South Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club's fourth annual "Old Crocks" veterans' tournament.

Men's and women's singles and doubles will be played in both junior veteran (35-and-over) and senior veteran (45-and-over) classes and there is a mixed doubles event for men 35-and-over and women of any age.

As well, there is a Methuselah men's singles event (55-and-over) for the real oldsters.

Prospective contestants may mail entries to the secretary, South Cowichan LTC, Box 717, Duncan, or telephone the president, Bev Cooper, at 748-1020 before Tuesday, July 17.

The grass-court tourney starts Friday, July 20, at 5 p.m. and continues on the Saturday and Sunday at 10 a.m. each day.

FASTEST SKI IN WORLD

CERVINIA, Italy (AP) — Alessandro Casse, a 27-year-old Italian fireman, became the fastest man on skis today as he flashed down the plateau Rosa glacier at the average speed of 184.237 kilometres an hour during the fifth day of racing in the one-kilometre race with flying start.

Organizers said Casse's average speed was a world record, even though the International Ski Federation would not ratify it.

Casse himself had set the previous record at 184.143 kph during the one-kilometre event in 1971.

With his performance, the Italian took the lead in the over-all standings of the race, which ends Saturday in this Italian Alpine resort.

Karl Beck of West Germany and Ereslo Vachet of Italy clocked the second fastest time at 183.486 to share second place in the standings.

Geoff Syrovatka, a Czech-born Canadian entry, had the 14th best time at 177.602.

Morgan Fires 69 To Sniff 'Lettuce'

ROBINSON, Ill. (AP) — The rabbits of the PGA tournament tour — those pro-golfers who are trying to make their first mark in the highly competitive field, are starting to nibble in the lettuce patch of the $125,000 Shrine-Robinson Golf Open.

The tournament is an all-out community effort because it's bucking the drain of top-notch players who are competing in the British Open. It's also a heyday for the lesser knowns on the circuit. They're wrecking par over the 6,556-yard, par-71 Crawford County Country Club course.

Of a field of 144 starters, 77 fired par or better in Thursday's first round and 30 were under 70.

Catching the scent of the $25,000 first prize and qualifying exemptions were Tom Kite, collegiate champion last year while attending the University of Texas, and Mike Higgins, 32, former Texas A and M golfer now at San Antonio.

Kite enters today's second round with a five-under-par 66 and a share of the lead with veteran Labron Harris and Australian David Graham.

John Morgan of Victoria was in contention with a 69 while Ben Kern of Toronto was another two strokes off the pace.

Higgins had a 67 and only 26 putts.

Weekend Salmon Outlook Above-Average in Spots

Salmon-fishing prospects, although not exactly outstanding in any specific location, are a little better than average in some Vancouver Island waters.

Not many of the chinooks caught during the past week, however, must have been as difficult to land as the 31:08-pounder taken Tuesday night by Dennis Begg of Victoria.

Dennis was spin-casting with a steelhead rod, 12-pound test line and a buzz-bomb off some rocks near Ten Mile Point when the fish struck.

It took him about one and a half hours, along with some help from friend George Gunniss and a neighbor's dinghy before the lunker was finally netted in the vicinity of Strongtide Island.

While rowing back with his prize in a fast-flowing tide, one of the oarlocks broke and the two started to paddle. Luckily, another neighbor happened to spot their plight through binoculars and came out to tow them in with his motor-boat.

That's one catch which will be remembered for a long time.

Other fishermen trolling in the same general area are picking up chinooks and "lots of ling cod" with either strip or super-strip and fairly-deep lines.

★ ★ ★

Over in Saanich Inlet, both chinooks and coho are being landed near Goldstream Island and the Mill Bay Marker. Coles Bay might also be worth a try this weekend.

"Still spotty" is the word from Deep Cove but boats going out to the vicinity of Arbutus Island (fish the west side) in Satellite Channel are coming back successful.

Action slowed down Wednesday at Pedder Bay when killer whales made one of their periodic visits although chinooks up to 41 pounds and coho averaging around seven pounds were taken late in the evening earlier in the week.

Chinooks and coho topping the 10-pound mark are sparking interest in scattered locations off Becher Bay while jack springs, coho and sockeye are providing spotty catches near Otter Point and Secretary Island.

Farther up-Island, moochers and buzz-bombers are picking up chinooks off Separation Point and in Cowichan Bay.

Bluebacks are providing good returns off Five Fingers and Gabriola Island while jacks and coho are reported off Bamfield and in Rainy Bay.

A few springs and coho are showing off Courtenay and some good coho fishing is reported in waters between Bates Beach and Little River.

Returns off Campbell River remain steady but are coming in from scattered spots.

Trout catches throughout the Island are excellent and sea-run cutthroats are being landed at Esquimalt Lagoon, Sooke Harbor and the Sarita River.

NIBBLES: Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association are reminded of the monthly Sunburn Derby from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Tickets for the $25,000 Salmon Derby are now on sale at all Super-Valu stores for $10 . . . You need a ticket for each line.

Doris Smith topped the VSIAA Sweetheart Derby with a 6:03-pounder last Sunday . . . Following, in order, were Ada Smith (5:14), Dianna Craig (5:13) and Susan Perks (4:05) . . . Hidden-weight winners were Marie Ekstrom and Wyn Rose . . . Draw winners were E. Gutensohn, B. Hofner, Lee Nevraunon, Lorraine Allan, H. D. Smith, Mrs. R. Bennett, Jean McIntosh, Amy Taylor, Gordon Austin, R. E. Godtel, Hans Radtke, R. M. Whitters, Ella Hallet, W. F. Wilson, Joanne Austin, R. Weaving, Marie Sidaway, Elva Radtke, Hugh Kelso and Fred Homstel.

Vic Holman captured the VSIAA monthly trophy for June with a catch that tipped the scales at 21:02 . . . Marie Sidaway won the ladies trophy with a 19-pounder and Mike Engel's 4:04 catch gave him the junior trophy . . . Hidden-weight winners were Ted Hunt, S. Cornish, A. Crothers and Alice Hartshorne.

SYDNEY SHOWS WAY IN JUNIORS' TOURNEY

TSAWWASSEN—Sydney Thomson of Victoria took the lead after the opening day of the B.C. junior women's golf championship Thursday at Beach Grove.

The 14-year-old Victoria junior champion from Royal Colwood shot an eight-over-par 42-40—82 to hold a two-stroke lead going into today's final round.

Lorna McPherson of Vancouver's Point Grey Club is in second spot with 84 and Lynn Cooke, also of Vancouver and the 1972 Saskatchewan junior champion, held third place with 85.

Two Marine Drive competitors, defending-champion Valerie White and Paula Phillips, are tied for fourth.

Other Victorians competing were Heather Stewart of Cedar Hill, who shot a 91 for seventh place, and three players from Uplands—Mary McKinnon (96), Tracy Pierpoint (99) and Jean McKinnon (104).

Two Players Chase Triples

Ted Davies and Sally Hemeon are neck-and-neck in a race for the triple crown in the Victoria City tennis championships.

Davies, already in the semis of the men's singles and doubles, partnered Val Scott for a three-set win over Jim Hassard and Felicity Graham in the mixed doubles quarter-finals Thursday at the Oak Bay Tennis Club.

Mrs. Hemeon, meanwhile, was scoring an equally convincing victory with Wendy Cuppage in the women's doubles quarters.

The triple-chasing twosome each play three semi-final matches today — all at the Racquet Club.

Finals will be held Saturday, starting at noon at the Racquet Club.

Two teenage girls also have eyes on the finals.

Brenda Cameron, 15, meets Oak Bay's Vivian Davies in one women's singles semi-finals, while 13-year-old Wendy Barlow meets Mrs. Hemeon, the defending champion, in the other women's semi.

Miss Barlow also figures in another semi-final match tonight. Partnering Tony Simnett, she plays Ray Alderguer and Mrs. Hemeon in a mixed contest.

Both men's singles semi-final matches will also be played tonight, with Davies taking on Ivor Goodmanson, and Greg Miller facing John Nichol.

Orioles' Golden Glove Roller Coaster at Plate

By The Associated Press

Brooks Robinson may be one of the steadiest glove men in baseball, but he's driving Earl Weaver nuts with his roller coaster act at the plate.

"Every time I want to bench Brooks, I don't," the manager of Baltimore Orioles said Thursday night. "I put him in the lineup and look what happens."

What happened was that Robinson, who's been having his woes at bat this season, smacked a pair of run-scoring singles, the second one a tie-breaker in the eighth inning to lift the Orioles to a 4-3 victory over Chicago White Sox.

In the rest of the American League, Boston Red Sox beat Texas Rangers 5-2, New York Yankees clouted Kansas City Royals 10-3, Detroit Tigers edged California Angels 7-6, Oakland A's swatted Milwaukee Brewers 8-4 and, in a twi-night doubleheader, Minnesota Twins beat Cleveland 8-4 before the Indians came back to gain a split with a 7-4 victory in the second game.

STRUGGLE OVER?

"I've been struggling with my hitting most of the early part of the season," Robinson said, "but I'm happy I'm coming out of it. It'll be nice to go into the all-star Game and be playing well."

Robinson, despite his weak .227 average, will be the starting third baseman for the annual mid-season classic later this month.

Boston's Luis Aparicio became the eighth player in the history of the game to bat 10,000 times. And his 10,000th was a single that helped build a run against Ranger bonus baby David Clyde. The big run, though, was Tommy Harper's tie-breaking homer in the fifth.

Dick Sharon and Duke Sims drew ninth-inning walks and Dick McAuliffe ripped a two-out tie-breaking single in the bottom of the ninth for Detroit against the Angels. Willie Horton had a three-run homer and Eddie Brinkman hit a two-run shot for the Tigers.

Ray Fosse's ninth-inning homer triggered a four-run Oakland rally that sent the Brewers down to defeat.

The Toy Cannon, little more than pop-gun for most of the season, showed some of his old firepower Thursday night.

Jim Wynn hit two homers, including a tie-breaking blast in the ninth inning, to lift Houston Astros to a 7-6 victory over Philadelphia Phils.

"The way I've been struggling, it is nice to know I contributed something," said the 31-year-old outfielder, a veteran of 11 seasons with Houston.

Wynn, nicknamed the Toy Cannon because he is exceptionally strong for a man who stands 5-feet-10 and weighs just 160 pounds, homered in the first, then broke a 6-6 tie with his 16th homer of the season with one out in the ninth off Barry Lersch, 2-4.

He also came through with a big defensive play in the eighth inning, turning an apparent single into a force-out with a bullet throw to second base.

In the only other National League games, Pittsburgh Pirates beat San Diego Padres 4-0 and Los Angeles Dodgers defeated St. Louis Cardinals, also by a 4-0 score.

Wynn's second homer climaxed a seesaw affair which saw both teams stage eighth-inning rallies.

Veteran Juan Pizarro was able to get out of the eighth-inning with the score tied, then earn his first victory of the year on Wynn's homer.

Luke Walker, a spot starter, hurled his first shutout of the season, stopping the Padres on five hits in Pittsburgh's victory. He struck out five and did not walk a batter.

The Pirates' Willie Stargell crashed a three-run homer in the fourth inning, raising his season total to a major-league leading 26.

The Dodgers' Andy Messersmith pitched a seven-hitter in Los Angeles' 4-0 triumph over St. Louis, striking out seven and not allowing any walks.

Bill Buckner hit his fourth homer of the season and drove in two more runs with a basesloaded single in the eighth.

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies made a shambles out of an interlocking lacrosse game Thursday night as they defeated the visiting Brantford Warriors, 28-13.

It was Brantford's third loss this week to Western Lacrosse Association teams, who have run up a goals for and against margin of 70 to 33.

The Warriors, Ontario Lacrosse Association leaders, play Coquitlam Adanacs Saturday night in their final game of their western tour.

Salmonbellies played their first game under new coach-manager Bill Stevenson. He took over from former head coach Keith Jackson, who was relieved of his duties less than 24 hours before game time.

Al Lewthwaite led New Westminster with six goals, while Wayne Goss had five and Ed Goss four.

Paul Suggat and Bill Coghill led the Warriors with three goals each.

Hotelmen Happy McKinty's Back

Larry McKinty came back, and Gorge Hotel is glad he did.

The veteran decided to confine his Senior Amateur Baseball League activities to coaching this year but was persuaded to end his retirement recently.

The decision produced its first big dividend for Gorge Thursday night at Lambrick Park when McKinty cracked a two-run homer in the first inning to start the Hotelmen on their way to a 4-2 victory over front-running Farmer Construction.

McKinty also figured in Gorge's final two runs. He drew a walk to push Bob Moysev into scoring position in the third inning. Moysey scored on George Fuller's single and McKinty later added the fourth run on a Farmer error.

Rick Cook spaced eight hits to score his fifth victory of the season while veteran George Brice was saddled with his third loss.

In a game Wednesday, southpaw Derek Drinkwater tossed a four-hitter and struck out 10 as last-place Greaves Movers defeated Al's Home Service 7-2.

Commercial Softball

Butler Brothers topped Dicker-Martens 9-6 and Royal Trust defeated Ingraham Hotel 9-7 in Commercial Men's Softball League games Wednesday night at Macdonald Park.

Runners Trip Hawks

COQUITLAM — Ray Durante scored six goals Wednesday night to help Richmond Roadrunners down Coquitlam J-Hawks 22-14 for their third win in four games in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League.

Gerry Pinder scored four goals and Rico Bellusci had three goals and three assists for Richmond. Harry Powless led Coquitlam with four goals and three assists.

Victory lifted the Roadrunners into a tie with the J-Hawks in the battle for the fourth and last playoff berth.

One Test for Power Types, One for Junior Sailors

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

The largest contingent of power cruisers in local history will make their way into Cadboro Bay Sunday afternoon after competing in the International Power Boat Association's predicted log race.

A fleet of about 75 boats — ranging in size from 25 to 120 feet — will be trying to cross the finish line near Strongtide Island, hitting their scheduled arrival time on the nose.

Cruisers from Tacoma, Seattle and the mainland will be taking part in the race which begins Saturday.

A good vantage point for watching the armada finish will be Ten Mile Point. The first of the boats can be expected to finish shortly after 1:30 p.m.

* * *

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club, host for the event, will sponsor another headliner this weekend.

This is the Canadian Yachting Association's 19-and-under single-handed championships.

Beginning Saturday, nine races will be sailed in Lasers on Olympic type courses, winding up on Tuesday.

The winner of the championship series will represent Canada at the International Yacht Racing Union's world youth championships, to be held in Portugal during August.

Tony Rose and Dennis Woodward will represent the local club in the series, pitting their sailing know-how against 14 other top junior sailors from across Canada.

Andrew Allan, Dave Chard, Layne Dexter, Paul Louie and Robin West are entered from the Vancouver area. Also competing will be Rupert Holmes-Smith of Oliver, Scott Sibley of Calgary, Bill Abbott of Sarnia, Ont. and Paul Clifford, John Freeman, Peter Higgins and Terry McLaughlin of the Toronto area.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, is making its facilities available for the national sail-out.

The B.C. Council of B.C. Yacht Clubs could do with a little help from sailboaters and power cruiser types who are taking time off from racing to get down to some exploratory cruising this summer.

The council is trying to get together a study on 29 sites for proposed marine anchorages that will embellish the atttraction of our cruising waters.

They're interested, too, in any other sites that individual boaters may have on their list of favorite calling places.

The council is interested in getting such information as prevalence of fog, sources of potable water supplies, recreational potentials, composition of the bottom and protection of wind in the various anchorages.

Questionnaires have been prepared to assist volunteers in the study project. These can be had by phoning Lynn Middleton at 656-3823 or writing her. The address is Box 5217, Postal Station 'B, Victoria.

Give her a ring. By helping the council you'll be doing yourself and every boater in these waters a big favor.

Forsyth Requires Borrowed Vehicle

Terry Forsyth, the current leader in super-stock points at Western Speedway, has to borrow a car Saturday or face the prospect of being passed in the standings.

Forsyth, who wrecked his 1965 Chevelle while competing in an open competition last Sunday in Portland, will be behind the wheel of a '64 Chevelle normally driven by Dan May of Nanaimo.

His main cause of concern is the feature race, a 75-lap competition for the July Cup, which is worth double points.

Forsyth leads runner-up Roy Haslam by 181 points but it is possible for a driver to pick up 240 points during the course of an evening when the main event is longer than 50 laps.

Former winners of the July Cup returning to try for a repeat are Gary Kershaw, Haslam, Rick O'Dell and possibly Larry Walker.

Stock car drivers will also be in action Saturday when time trials get underway at 7 p.m.

Lions Drop Five

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference Thursday released five players, two of them Canadians.

Released were Canadian defensive tackle Paul Patterson, who played for the club last season, Canadian wide receiver Bill MacGregor and imports Randy McDougall, a defensive back, Tim Sullivan, a running back, and Steve Vogel, a linebacker.

The team also announced that Garrett Hunsperger, the defensive tackle who injured his right knee in Tuesday's exhibition game against Hamilton Tiger-Cats, was still being treated by doctors. Surgery may ne needed. Defensive back Wayne Matherne, also injured Tuesday, will be out six to eight weeks with a broken foot and quarterback Karl Douglas, who suffered a sprained ankle, has had a protective cast placed on the ankle. He may miss the team's next exhibition game against Winnipeg Blue Bombers Wednesday.

Rosemary's Arm, Bat Show Way

Rosemary Fuller sparkled both on the mound and at the plate Thursday while guiding Vicettes to an 11-2 Victoria Senior Women's Softball League triumph over MacDonald's Furniture at Hyacinth Park.

In the other game, CAV Electronics bounced Moose Lodge Loyals, 15-2.

Miss Fuller struck out 12 batters and yielded no bases on balls while pitching a five-hitter.

At bat, she tagged three singles.

Peace Marks 12th of July

BELFAST (UPI) — Northern Ireland passed its "biggest test of the year" Thursday in violence-free celebrations marking a 283-year-old battle that led to Protestant domination over Roman Catholics in the province.

British commanders had ordered 28,500 troops and police to keep the peace as 80,000 Protestants paraded at 18 rally points throughout the province. But an army spokesman reported only minor incidents and said they occurred after the celebrations.

"Yesterday was our biggest test of the year, but much of the credit for the lack of incidents must go to the people of Northern Ireland themselvs," the spokesman said. "There were welcome signs of a willingness neither to give nor to take offence."

In Belfast, where the biggest demonstrations were held to mark the Battle of the Boyne — won by Protestant King William of Orange over Catholic King James II in 1690 — security forces recorded a "blank sheet so far as trouble on the streets was concerned."

A total of 845 persons have died in four years of violence among Protestants, Catholics and security forces in Northern Ireland.

The army spokesman reported a rocket attack on an army post in Londonderry's bogside gasworks and sniping attacks in the city's Creggan and Bogside districts late Thursday after the paraders had gone home.

He also reported attacks by rock-throwing youths and sniper fire on patrols and observation posts. One soldier was slightly wounded, he said.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two Victoria youths who stole the ignition wires from a parked car were fined $100 each in Victoria provincial court Thursday.

Daniel Graham, 18, of 2635 Blanshard, and Keith Wherry, 21, of 1515 Cook, took the wires June 24 from a car on a Douglas Street car lot.

Judge William Ostler was told the youths took the wires because they were broke and needed new ones for their car.

Ostler said he felt the act was an impulsive one and would not likely to be repeated. "It was inexcusable, but impulsive."

William Elliott, 2622 Quadra, was fined a total of $800 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving and driving with a blood alcohol content over .08.

Elliott was stopped by police in the parking lot of the Oak Bay Marina Wednesday. He was charged with impaired driving and told not to drive his car home.

The man complied, but after he got home and had eaten supper he decided to go back and pick up his car, Elliott told Ostler.

As he was driving home he was stopped again by police and charged with the second offence.

He was fined $300 for impaired driving and $500 for the .08 charge.

* * *

Jae Lacey, 22, of Powell River was fined a total of $525 for driving without insurance or licence plates and for driving with a blood alcohol content over .08.

Lacey told the court he had just bought his motorcycle and was driving it from Powell River to Victoria.

He said he had been drinking when he was stopped by police on Government Street Wednesday night and he had also "shot" two capsules of MDA, a restricted drug.

He was fined $250 for driving without insurance, the same amount for driving with a blood alcohol content over .08 and $25 for having no licence plates.

* * *

Lois Alice Lajeunesse, 24, of 2911 Sooke Lake Road, was fined $200 for shoplifting May 22. She took $28.49 worth of goods from a Victoria department store.

* * *

Four people appeared in traffic court charged with impaired driving and were fined by Judge Harold Alder.

Douglas Allan Scholfield, 61, of 2450 Sutton Road, was fined $350 after he was stopped on Burnside May 20.

Paul Emil Calve, 38, of 4213 Carey, was fined $350 after he was stopped June 9 on Douglas.

Charles Willard Batt, 30, of 502 Dallas, who struck a parked car on Dallas, was fined $350, had his licence suspended for one year and told to pay the $1,700 damage.

Rene Paul Pepin, 24, of Cobble Hill, was fined $500 when he was stopped June 27 on Tennyson.

Buses Win Battle of Curb

Victoria city council backed down Thursday in its effort to rid the harbor side of the Causeway to doubledecker buses.

No traffic order will be issued to give legal status to No Parking signs put up there last week — right where the government-owned London Omnibus Tourist have two parking spaces.

After the signs went up, Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer called the city's bluff by telling LOT drivers to ignore them.

Council split narrowly in deciding not to issue the order. Aldermen Sam Bawlf, Alf Hood, Clyde Savage and Mike Young were in favor of making the buses move; aldermen Malcolm Anderson, Tom Christie, Percy Frampton and Bill Tindall said they should stay.

Mayor Peter Pollen cast the deciding vote to take away the signs, but not before he chastized the minister for attempting to ignore traffic laws, the government for buying the tour line and the city for allowing any of the buses on the Causeway.

Of Lorimer's decision, Pollen said: "It is an incredible action by a minister, particularly in view of the outstanding relations we have had with the government."

Of Vic Parker, provincial transit director who presumably recommended the purchase of LOT, Pollen said: "This young director of transit was hired to direct transit not to direct a series of carnivals."

Of the buses parked in front of The Empress, Pollen said: "I am constantly overwhelmed that we should use for bus storage a street that is among the most beautiful and expensive pieces of geography anywhere."

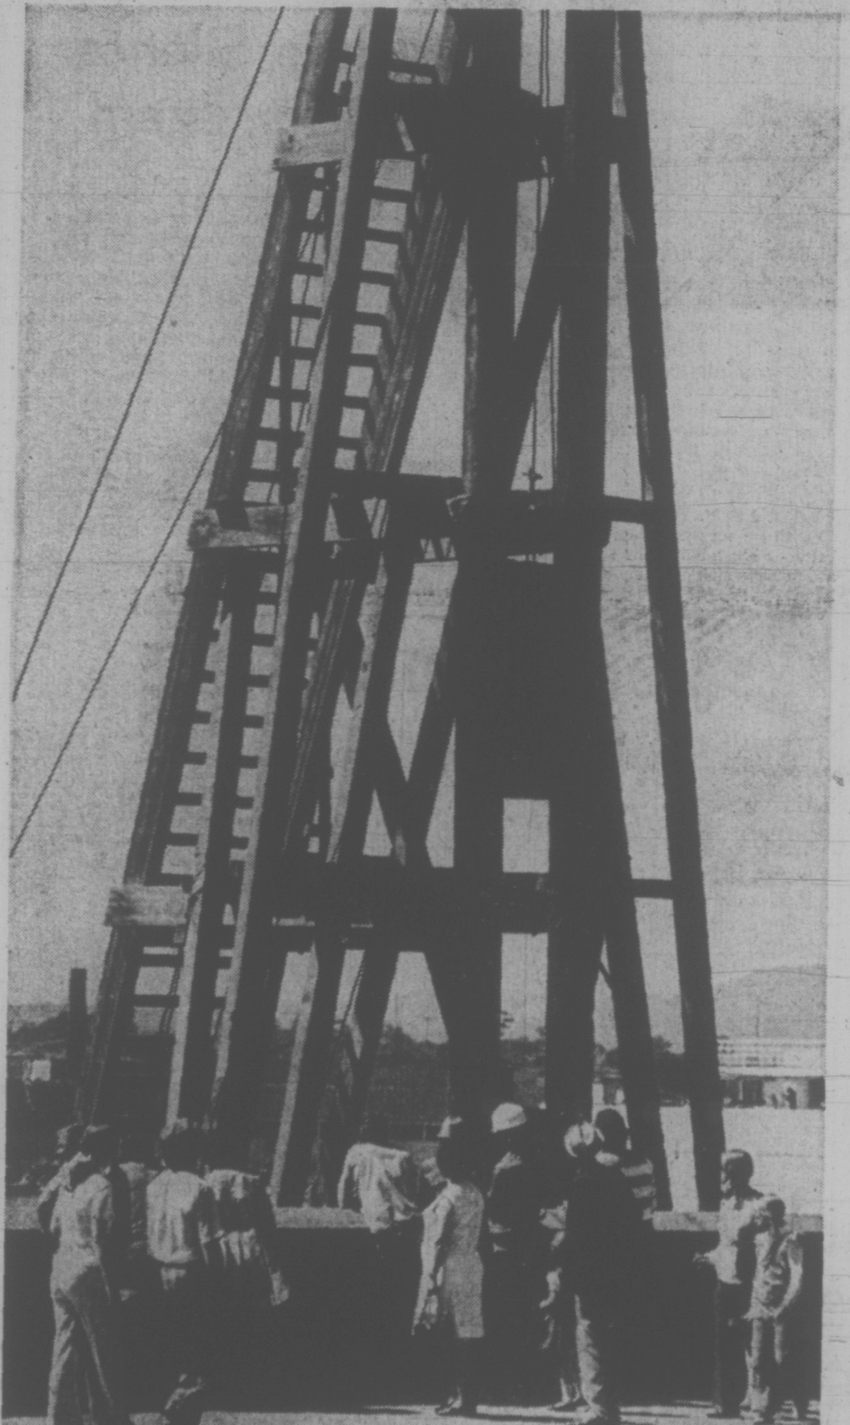
198 Join Scramble For 40 Choice Lots



PILE-DRIVING is the latest project of Victoria's sidewalk superintendents and they gather daily at the Causeway. The piles are the first step in building a pedestrain promenade around the Inner Harbor. The project should be finished in October. (John McKay photo)

The city of Victoria has received 198 bids to purchase 40 lots of prime residential property in the northeast corner of the city.

"It will take at least a week or two weeks before we can make a recommendation on who gets what," said land commissioner A. G. Joyce.

He estimates that when all the bids are sorted out, the recommendations to council are made, and the purchases arranged, the city will be about $500,000 richer.

Bids varied from $3,500 to $17,000 a lot and many of the bids were for more than one lot, Joyce said.

Bidding closed July 10.

Located on the city-side of the Saanich municipal border, the subdivision is bounded by Cook, Tolmie and Finlayson. It is 10 minutes from downtown and overlooks the Cedar Hill golf course.

The area is zoned for single-family homes and, in order to assure higher quality development, the city has applied the same minimum floor space requirements — 1,400 square feet for a bungalow and 2,000 square feet for a two-storey home — that are required in the Rockland areas.

All lots have sewers, storm drain and water main laterals already installed.

The land, which was acquired by the city many years ago for taxes, was assembled under a plan begun two years ago. The land assembly cost $157,000 of which $76,000 was contributed by the federal government.

WOMAN BADLY HURT

A woman is in critical condition at Victoria General Hospital, suffering from head injuries, following a head-on crash on Metchosin Road late Thursday night.

Another person travelling in the car is in fair condition with back injuries.

Three other passengers were discharged after being treated.

Colwood RCMP said a car driven by Ronald Legere, 19, of Work Point Barracks, was in collison with their car.

The names of the five have not been released, pending notification of next of kin.

A passenger in Legere's car, Dave Smith, 18, of 625 Bryden Court, suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Police said both cars involved in the crash were wrecked, and estimated a total of more than $2,000 damage.

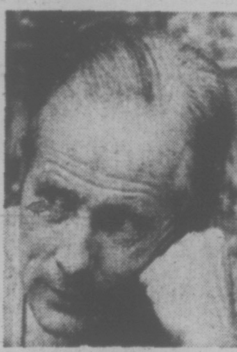
Curtain Rises Early On Play for Royal

Mayor Peter Pollen winced at Thursday's city council meeting when the hush-hush ceiling price for the Royal Theatre — $250,000 — came out in public with the reading of some routine correspondence.

"It's supposed to be secret," said the mayor who is leading the negotiations on behalf of the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee to buy the theatre from Famous Players Development Ltd.

The letter was a simple memo from the committee reporting a motion to proceed with the bargaining.

The proposal to buy the theatre — as a home for the Victoria Symphony and for public theatrical and musical events — was questioned by Ald. Sam Bawlf and Ald. Malcolm Anderson.



POLLEN
. . ."supposed to be secret."

Bawlf wondered if a feasibility study had been done and if consideration has been given to "the operation structure."

Pollen replied that the 50-year-old building had been structurally examined and found sound. He thought the operation might be handled under contract by the city. The title of the building, if bought by the intermunicipal committee, would probably be vested in the regional district, he said.

Anderson wondered about the "long term needs for a conference hall."

Pollen said "it is quite clear" that a convention-cultural centre "is two years away at least."

Ald. Mike Young defended the purchase saying "if you take the acquisition of the land itself, it's not a bad investment."

Council voted unanimously to endorse continued negotiations.

Ask the Times

Q. We have a Siamese cat who will be 19 in August. Could you please tell me if this is some kind of record?—T.S.

A. Although this is a ripe old age for a cat it's not quite a record. The Siamese cat who travelled with Miles and Beryl Smeeton, when they sailed their famous roundings of Cape Horn, was 21 when he died. He survived all his ocean voyaging, dying of an infection on the game farm which the Smeetons now run in the Alberta foothills. The granddaddy of all cats, however, was Puss, who belonged to a Mrs. T. Holway who lived in North Devon, England. Puss was 36 when he died Nov. 5, 1939.

Q. I'm always intrigued when I hear people say "God bless you" after somebody sneezes. Can you tell me how this custom originated?—G.D.

A. There appears to be no written record of how this custom began but it is said it started in the old days when people on their death bed made their last dying rattle. As they did, their family and friends looking on would give them a last "God bless you" salute.

Q. I have been told that putting red food coloring into the syrup fed to hummingbirds will cause them to be sterile. Is this true?

A. No.

EX-MINISTER TRIES COURTS FOR UIC CLAIM

Waldo Skillings, former Socred cabinet minister, has taken the federal government to court over its ruling that he cannot collect unemployment insurance.

The 66-year-old former Victoria MLA and trade minister says he paid unemployment insurance premiums during his last 37 weeks in office and then "became unemployed through no fault of my own."

He was defeated in the Aug. 30 provincial elections after 12 years in office.

The federal government has ruled that Skilling's $30,000 a year position as cabinet minister is not insurable and refused to pay the $107 a week he might otherwise have received in benefits.

Skillings, who has an income from investments and a provincial government pension, took the case to court this week where Federal Court Judge Frank Collier reserved decision.

A UIC spokesman said today all the Socred cabinet ministers began paying unemployment insurance premiums in January, 1972, when government employees became eligible for the scheme.

★

"Their employer was in error," the spokesman said.

Since then the government has been notified not to make deductions for the current cabinet ministers, he said, and the former ministers have been allowed a refund of their premiums or a rebate on their income tax payments.

Three other Socred ministers apparently applied for benefits but did not pursue the issue when the national revenue and taxation department ruled against them.

Skillings, who was an insurance agent for 25 years before entering the cabinet, is eligible for a third income from the Canada pension plan but has not yet applied for it.

UIC benefits can be collected provided the recepient is under 70 years of age and has not accepted the Canada pension.

The former minister has registered with Canada Manpower for work, as required by UIC regulations, and is looking for work in management and sales.

Skillings was not available for comment.

Safety Aids Were Lacking: Pilot

The government-recommended passage around Haddington Island near Alert Bay is unsafe for a ship the size of the freighter Irish Stardust, a marine pilot told provincial court today.

The passage lacked navigational aids, the turns were sharp and the winds and tides hit the ship broadside.

That was part of the testimony given today in court by Capt. A. D. Jones, one of the B.C. pilots on the Irish Stardust when she grounded on Haddington Island late Jan. 24.

The ship is charged with discharging 200 tons of oil, or an oily mixture into the waters of Broughton Strait as a result of the grounding.

Capt. Jones, a registered B.C. pilot since last September, was the first witness called today by defence lawyer Donovan Lowry. Lowry is expected to call at least two more witnesses later today.

Jones testified he had intended to take the Irish Stardust around the other side of the island due to what he considered unsafe conditions in the government-recommended passage. But a radio call from another ship on his projected course made him change that course.

"I couldn't tell exactly how much she was setting towards the Island because it was so black out," Jones said.

The only thing Jones could see outside the ship was one navigational light on the west side of the island. A new tricolor light has been installed on the island since the Stardust ran aground, he said.

Jones and five other crew members were in the wheelhouse when the ship grounded. There was no loud bang or crash when the ship hit and the Stardust did not stop. It did, however, lift to the right side approximately 15 degrees.

Jones said he ordered the engine stopped and had the ship's master, Capt. James Caird, called from his room where he was sleeping.

He said the stern of the ship was slipping towards the beach again after the Stardust got off the rocks. Jones kept the ship's speed at eight knots, half-speed, because of the strong tides in the area.

The grounding was not the fault of the ship, her crew, or the master, Jones said.

The maximum fine on the charge is $100,000.

Caird was found guilty in May of not reporting an oil spill to the pollution prevention officer in Nanaimo.

His sentence will be handed down by Ostler after the ship's trial is finished.

Grants in Lieu of Taxes

Provincial government grants in lieu of taxes to municipalities were made official today with release of a cabinet order-in-council passed Thursday.

The City of Victoria gets $305,944.43 from the government under the grant system, which the province pays a rate of 15 mills on 100 per cent of the assessed value of provincial government land in each municipality and 75 per cent of the improvements on the land.

Under the scheme, Saanich gets $62,224, while Esquimalt and Oak Bay get no money.

The grants in lieu of taxes are taken for granted by each municipality when it draws up its annual budget. For example, the City of Victoria budgetted for a provincial government grant of $306,000 this year, said city comptroller Mason Sheldrick.

The total amount of money paid out this year by the province in grants in lieu of taxes is $1,232,738.42.

$250,000 From Gov't For Museum

A special spending warrant of $25,000 has been passed by the provincial government for display projects at the Provincial Museum.

The warrant was made public in cabinet orders released today.

The provincial museum was allocated a budget of $1,057,254 in spending estimates passed by the legislature this spring.

A new Indian display is one area where the money will be spent, Deputy Provincial Secretary Laurie Wallace said today.

Antiques Appeal to Young Set

elizabeth forbes

In the few weeks since she opened a small antique store on Oak Bay Avenue, Kay McGregor has been delighted with the number of young Victorians in the 25 to 30 age group who have shown interest in antiques.

"Normally, at this season of the year (in her experience), it is the tourists and especially the Americans who frequent antique stores," she tells you.

"Here, it has been different. Not only do these young people show delight in the old pieces. Not only do they browse. They are really interested in furnishing their homes with early Canadiana. And they are buying."

Mrs. McGregor understands this urge to collect and to own. For it was her love for collecting and a determination to furnish a home with early Canadian furniture that started her in the antique business.

"I really think I came by this interest first through my Canadian heritage which goes back five generations to its roots in Ontario," she says.

Then she reminds you that in Ontario in pioneer days craftsmen travelled from farmhouse to farmhouse.

"They would settle down at one place for several months and in that time make the furniture needed for every-day living.

"It was all done by hand, of course. That is why you do not find many pieces alike from that pioneer era."

Originally a Victoria girl, Kay started out in newspaper work in this city. Again, it was natural that she give news writing a whirl for her father, Neil D. McIntyre, had been editor of our morning paper.

However, it was with the Victoria Times that she worked as a full-fledged news reporter in the years 1940-46.

When the first ship bringing prisoners-of-war home from Japan came into harbor here, it was Kay McIntyre who went out to meet that ship and who was the first reporter to file the PoWs' stories.

Kay gave up reporting when she married Bruce McGregor, an officer in the Canadian navy and a son of our own "Mr. Victoria" — Fred McGregor.

Later, in the 1950s she did go back to news writing, for a time, with the Colonist. Until her husband was transferred, first to Regina and then to Hamilton, Ontario.

There the McGregors bought an old stone farmhouse and 10 acres of treed land on the Guelph Line in what is known as rural Burlington. With the place went an old-time carriage house.

"By then we had more than enough antiques for our own home, yet we were picking up extra pieces every time we went out for a drive," Kay says.

"So it was a fairly easy move to turn the carriage house into The Farmhouse Antiques."

That business prospered. It grew. And, in the 16 years they were down there it kept the McGregors busy, not only selling antiques but finding and buying them as well.

He left the navy in 1958 and for the next 13 years was in public service with Halton County. When he finally retired they began to think of returning to Victoria.

The farmhouse and acreage were sold. The carriage house and the business, too. But not all the antiques.

Some of the oldest pieces came west in the autumn of 1972 with the McGregors — including a good selection of furniture made by those itinerant craftsmen, long years ago.

Once settled in their own home out in Gordon Head and with their antique furnishings in place, there was a surplus just crying out to be displayed. That's how The Villager Antiques came into existence.

Already there has been so much interest in this display Mrs. McGregor says she will soon have to travel back to Ontario to find more pieces.

Through past connections down there she does have many good contacts. Already she knows of furniture that is being saved for her. Authentic pioneer furniture.

"Canadians are becoming more and more conscious of their heritage," she says. "They know what is authentic and what is not."

She believes this surge of interest started in Ontario with opening of such places as Upper Canada Village and the preservation of the delightful pioneer atmosphere of Niagara-On-Lake.

"That interest has now reached British Columbia. People, including the 25-to-30 age group, know about authentic antiques and if they are in earnest about collecting, they are turning away from anything, even if it dates back to early days, that was factory made."

Absolute Silence Must for Exam

DEAR ABBY: Let's review the situation' During a written examination, one student whispered to another, "Gee, this test is hard."

The other replied, "I know."

The teacher observed the pair, so in grading them she added both their grades together and divided by two.

The student who suffered the reduced grade complained to you, and you supported his right to complain since he was not cheating.

Abby, I teach school, and I insist upon absolute silence during examinations. If I didn't, the students would be "commenting" about the weather, the time, how hard the test is, etc., all during the examination, and it's impossible to tell which comment is legitimate and which is to help a friend pass a test.

Furthermore, some students need absolute silence in order to concentrate, so any noise is not fair to them.

Those students were lucky they weren't in my room. I'd have given them both a zero. —Teacher.

DEAR TEACHER: And judging from the number of teachers who wrote to express the same opinion, were they to grade my answer I, too, would have rated a zero. I hereby reverse myself. The only comment which can be considered legitimate during a test is, "Call an ambulance!"

DEAR ABBY: What do you do with a man who refuses to bathe or brush his teeth? He's a Saturday nighter from way back. He thinks if he takes a two-minute shower on a Saturday night it's good for a week.

I have hinted, nagged, told him outright, and even threatened to leave him. Nothing helps. He won't even use a mouthwash. And then he wonders why I don't care to kiss him. ICK!—Had It.

DEAR HAD IT: In answer to your question: "What do you do with a man who refuses to bathe or brush his teeth?"—Nothing!

DEAR ABBY: It's reassuring to know that you do not only give advice, you yourself do what you teell others to do. I refer to the fact that you carry on your person two cards indicating that you have donated your eyes and kidneys after your demise. Can't you make it three cards? As the father of a child who has a growth problem, I beg of you to mention the Human Growth Foundation. The pituitary gland is the major source of cure for dwarfism. Information is available by writing to P.O. Box 1368, High Point, N.C. 27261.—Jimmy's Father.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Saturday, July 14
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): One in authority is measuring your value. Key now is to avoid rush, push or bluster. Make intelligent concessions. Goal is in sight. Strive for harmony. Deal with Taurus, Libra persons. Correct safety hazard.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Much of what happens has ring of undercover or secrecy. You will have to determine what can be revealed, what must be kept confidential. No one is likely to provide completely satisfactory answers. Decision must be your own.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends tend to be aggressive. Heed your own counsel. Those who push, urge you to rush, are only too willing to take chances, with you bearing consequences. Don't forget lessons learned from recent experiences.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finish what you start — leave no unneceshary loose ends. Wait and observe — stepping into new areas now would be an error. Know it and practice restraint. One you respect may have temper tantrum. Don't be too quick to judge.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New approach to work and health is necessary. Give attention to possible circulatory problem. Obtain proper medical advice. One who shares your interests confides problem. Remember past favors. Respond in generous fashion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Relationships intensify. You have hunch, which should be heeded, concerning financial pattern. Plug loophole which is leading to loss. Aquarian could be involved. Don't play games. Do what must be done and do it in forthright manner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pressures are relieved. You are able to perceive beyond immediate situation. You do yourself an injustice by attempting to stick to status quo. You do have life of your own to live. Those who care will understand.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent now is on how you deal with neighbors, relatives and co-workers. Be specific, frank and mature. Aquarius, Leo persons could play important roles. Be thorough. Take nothing for granted. Check apparent minor details.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Steady pace is necessary. If extravagant, you invite embarrassing loss. You won't be able to buy affection. Know it and conduct yourself in realistic, practical manner. Take possible lovers' quarrel in stride.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take initiative despite possible family objections. You own judgment, intuition now are apt to be on target. Display strength of convictions. Giving in for sake of convenience might create lingering resentment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Argument could occur behind scenes. You are supported by one close to you. Your position will be vindicated. Key is to be patient without being lethargic. Issue may resolve around residence, need for change or adjustment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friendly advice regarding money should not be taken as gospel. Adhere to rules, regulations. Trying to skirt a law would be error. Relative who seems to know much may, in fact, lack basic grasp of situation.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are generally energetic, inquisitive. You draw to you many persons born under Gemini and Virgo. December could be one of your most significant months this year. If single, marriage cycle is heightened. If married, additional activity connected with children is indicated.

We all know that habits — good and bad ones — are formed while we are very young. Therefore it is a good idea to teach children at an early age the importance of regular tooth care and how to brush their teeth.

The small illustrated eight-page folder Why Should I Brush My Teeth? explains what happens if a youngster neglects his teeth.

It tells him that if he doesn't brush, especially after meals, some food remains sticking to his teeth. Bacteria in the food then form an acid which dissolves the tooth enamel. As a result, a cavity will form. If this happens, he will have to go to a dentist to have it cleaned and filled. If he waits too long before he sees a dentist, the cavity may become so big that it will cause him a nasty toothache.

There are many pictures that show how teeth should be brushed most effectively. The booklet also recommends the daily use of dental floss.

With your request please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Consumer Relations Director, Colgate-Palmolive Ltd., Colgate Avenue, Toronto 8, Ontario. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

Nitrates in Food Seen as Hazard

NEW YORK (CP) — Three scientists report they have found evidence that nitrate and nitrite preservatives in food form a substance in the stomach that causes convulsions when injected into rats.

Dr. Adam Lis of the University of Oregon Medical School's nucleic acid laboratory says in a report to the American Chemical Society that under conditions found in the stomach, nitrites react with a natural component of meat, creatinine, to form a substance that causes neuromuscular disorders in rats.

Creatinine has been described as a natural chemical associated with the onset of sleep.

Drs. Lis and D. I. McLaughlin and R. K. McLaughlin say the disorders in rats are caused by the compound creatinine-5-oxime, and range from loss of alertness, muscular weakness and pelvic droop to twitches, tremors and convulsions.

The amount needed to cause these disorders was not specified in the summary of Dr. Lis' work.

"Due to the abundance of nitrate and nitrite in the food and water supplies of man, the possible formation of reaction products with creatinine is an important consideration in the effort to determine the clinical significance of their increasing role in our environment," Dr. Lis says.

"The formation of creatinine-oximes and their effects on man needs to be studied."

Creatinine, Lis says, is the compound which tells the muscle fibre when to rest, giving cells time to recover from extended activity and metabolic depletions by reducing the transmission of messages between the nerves and muscle fibres.

Lactic acid, which can form creatinine, accumulates in muscle as a result of muscular activity.

"Just what chemical path is used to initiate sleep onset and just where it might act in the brain is still conjectural; however, the accumulation of creatinine and lactate seems to be responsible for drowsiness," Lis says.

Abortion Referral Closes

Victoria's Abortion Counselling Service will close Friday after nearly three years in operation.

Mrs. Elizabeth Murrson, 42, who founded the advisory service when she was refused an abortion during her fifth pregnancy, said today her counselling and referral service in "no longer needed."

The service kept a list of doctors willing to process abortions and locations in the United States and Canada where abortions could be obtained.

Mrs. Murrison says she now receives few calls because doctors are processing their own patients and groups such as the Women's Centre and Cool-Aid are referring women to doctors instead of the counselling centre.

Most of her calls lately have been from young, single girls. Mrs. Murrison believes this is because most doctors are willing to schedule abortions for married women or divorced women with children but tend to encourage healthy young women to have their baby.

Mrs. Murrison says she will re-open the service if the need arises.

"It's obvious women want the right to have abortions or there wouldn't be so many performed."

The service has counselled 651 women since it opened Sept. 13, 1970. Only 20 of the women seeking abortion were repeaters, 411 were single and 158 married.

DREAM REAL TO HIM

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The dream of eight-year-old John Guiry was to become a policeman. His parents figure the dream kept him alive for the past three years.

Back in 1970, doctors told Mr. and Mrs. John Guiry of suburban Colonie that John had leukemia and only a short time to live.

John was too busy thinking about his dream to let reality get in the way.

He collected more than 1,000 police patches and as many souvenirs as he could. His police shirt from Marlboro, Mass., was a prize possession, and when he was rushed to a hospital after severe hemorrhaging, he refused to remove the shirt.

Four days later, his mother convinced him to let doctors remove the blood-covered garment.

The dark-haired little boy had caputred the hearts of area police and frequently was seen riding in a cruiser during his trips to the hospital. Several departments made him an honorary member. Once he received a baffling letter from a police commissioner in Alaska promising to hold a job open for him.

The promise puzzled John who asked his mother, "Why is he doing that? I am a policeman."

John, who was described by his mother as adding "so much to our lives," will be buried today. Leukemia finally cut into his dream Tuesday night.

Five-year-old Bret Harsham reads at Grade 7 level

College for Kids Opens

KENTFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Scott Lundholm, an eight-year-old interested in marine biology, never dreamed he would be studying the subject in college this summer.

But he is one of 80 children enrolled in College for Kids, a program initiated by the College of Marin here to lure gifted five-to 12-year-olds from vacation play to classrooms.

Troy Fotchman likes to read and says the speed-reading and media-exploration class is her favorite.

She's 12, and she's done in two weeks what some of my college students work on all semester," says instructor Jay Stryker.

Bret Harsham celebrated his fifth birthday last month and as he progressed through Grades 5 and 6 readings and moved to the Grade-7 level.

Jesse Harsham, Bret's mother and community co-ordinator for the program, said the program originally was paid for by the children's parents with matching funds from the college which is located north of San Francisco Bay. Public funds are being sought now, she said.

"This was a very necessary program because so many school districts have no outlet for gifted children," said Mrs. Harsham.

Stryker, also an instructor at the college, said the program has taught him a great deal about youngsters and has been fun.

"I'm amazed at how much they can do if they have the ability to concentrate. The important thing is to get them away from being just their parents' children."

British Housewife Seeks Conjugal Rights

LONDON (AP) — A British housewife is fighting to have a baby by her husband while he's in penitentiary.

Britain's penal code effectively decrees that punishment for crime includes deprivation of conjugal rights.

Margaret Tuttle, 30-year-old former cabaret singer, cannot have sexual relations with her husband when she visits him in prison.

But she wants his baby — and she thought she had an answer: artificial insemination.

Last week, however, the home office refused to allow her husband Jimmy, serving 18 years, with at least 10 yet to go, for armed robbery, to father his second child in this way.

"I am very disappointed," Mrs. Tuttle said at her comfortable $50,000 North London home. "But I haven't given up yet."

She has appealed to Sir John Peel, the Queen's gynaecologist, to take up her case.

Peel headed a British Medical Association (BMA) study group which recently urged more widespread artificial insemination by donor to help childless couples.

Peel said the refusal of the home office to agree to her artificial insemination plan was wrong.

If Mrs. Tuttle lived in Denmark, Sweden or Yugoslavia she would have little or no problem. Prisons in Yugoslavia go out of their way to encourage prisoners to lead as normal a sex life as possible.

A jail at Nis, an industrial city near Belgrade, three years ago opened a "house of love" within its walls where convicts on good behavior could spend time with their wives or girl-friends.

Couples were provided with a double room apartment which had flowers, clean sheets and curtained windows.

In Denmark wives are allowed to see their husbands and no guards are present.

Swedish prisons allow unsupervised visits in single rooms every weekend at open institutions and twice a month at closed penitentiaries. Most jails have special rooms, often equipped with sofas, where couples can meet in private.

In Belgium, a prisoner who has served half his term can work outside during the day. He is free to visit his wife as he travels to or from his job.

In Britain, the National Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders says the country's many overcrowded "Victorian monstrosity" prisons are not suited to conjugal visits. Twenty couples frequently file into one bleak room, watched over by wardens, for their yearly ration of six visiting hours.

Requests for artificial insemination were rare, a spokesman said, and none had ever been granted. He would not elaborate.

But an informed source explained the home office feared in Mrs. Tuttle's case creation of a precedent which might involve as many as one-third of Britain's prison population of 37,000 requesting facilities to provide artificial insemination.

Mrs. Tuttle says that by the time her husband leaves prison, she may be too old to bear another child.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Criticism Root of Stutter

Mothers sometimes write me much concerned because one of their sons has started to stutter. He is self-conscious with anyone who he fears will be critical about him. For instance, one mother told me that her boy stutters with her, but not with her husband; apparently because the boy knows that she is much more distressed about his stuttering than his father is. His father doesn't mind.

Curiously, in an article by psychiatrist Dr. Joyce Brothers, I read that a study made of American Indian tribes in Idaho and South Dakota showed that they have no stutterers; they haven't even a word for stuttering in their language. This may be because Indian children are not criticized much by their parents.

Brothers says that stutterers generally start to have the trouble around the age of three, although some start only after they are several years older. If one wants to help a stuttering child, says Brothers, he must do what he can to create for him a calm environment that won't produce in him anxiety, tension, and particularly the feeling of disapproval.

It is well known that when a stutterer talks to his dog, he does not stutter. I have heard of children who had been stuttering, but when their parents were much more affectionate with them, or showed no disgust, the child got well.

SELF DECEPTION

Oftentimes as a phsysician, I have seen patients who were very adept at fooling themselves, perhaps about certain unpleasant and distressing facts regarding their body. To show what I mean, years ago I saw in my office an able woman of 35 or so, unmarried, very nervous, and evidently a distressed loner who lived with a relative.

After checking the woman over and finding no sign of what we doctors call organic disease (meaning something that we can demonstrate), I noted that on her upper lip she had a growth of dark hair that made her look as if she had a moustache, and it seemed to me as if it could be the cause of at least some of her troubles.

So I asked her, as tactfully as I could, "Why don't you get rid of that little moustache of yours? It must be very distresing to you, and you could easily shave it off, or take it off with a depilatory cream, or bleach it so it would be less noticeable."

I was so surprised when she said, "What are you talking about? I haven't any moustache." When I made her look in a mirror she acted as if that was the first time she had ever seen the abnormal hairiness. Finally, she realized that in an effort to avoid the distress of having a moustache, she had compelled herself not to see it.

Soon I was able to convince her to take the moustache off, and from that day onward she was a different and much happier and more social woman. She also showed that she was a gifted person, when she wrote a play which remained on the stage for more than a year.

I have had several patients with a facial defect who acted for a while as if they had never noticed it, and yet were much happier when they had the defect corrected. Oftentimes, also, obese patients have been able to fool themselves into thinking that they "weren't eating a thing, and were still gaining weight."

ACUPUNCTURE EXAGGERATED

SEATTLE (AP) — The Chinese are irritated at the exaggerated role given acupuncture in their country, Dr. John Bonica, University of Washington chief anesthesiologist, says.

Bonica said western-style anesthesia is used in 85 per cent of Chinese surgery while acupuncture accounts for only 10 to 20 per cent. He said the technique does not eliminate pain, but makes it bearable.

Acupuncture appears to fail 10 to 15 per cent of the time, he said, and is not often used in touchy chest and brain surgery or when there is infection or body discharges.

Bonica said no evidence was presented to back a Chinese claim that the technique is not harmful and urged carefully controlled research programs on the effectiveness, specific needle sites and types of diseases that can be treated by acupuncture.

He will help prepare a report on acupuncture as chairman of a national committee chosen by the National Academy of Science.

It Was All He Could Bare

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A Wyoming cowboy has a tale to tell around the campfire: He was "hoodwinked" by three females and lost his boots, his clothes and $634.

Police said Myron Wix, Buffalo, Wyo., told them he was attacked by three young women who threw a hood over him after he got into their car for a pleasure ride.

The females then put a choker around his neck and stripped him.

Wix told authorities they took every stitch of clothing except his socks and dumped him from his car.

He said he had $14 in his pants pockets and $620 pinned inside his undershorts.

He later recovered his shirt, pants and boots, police said.

But his undershorts — and $634 — are still missing.

Believe It or Not, Another Martha Mitchell

WASHINGTON — A phoney Martha Mitchell has been telephoning newspaper editors and reporters recently and the real Martha is hopping mad about it.

The real Mrs. Mitchell called United Press International Thursday to deny she had telephoned the wire service's Washington bureau the previous morning to say, "I want you to know that my husband is absolutely correct in all his testimony."

A woman with a southern accent, lower than Martha's and husky-voiced as if she had been drinking, has been calling members of the Washington Press impersonating the wife of the former attorney general.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Ali McGraw, star of the film Love Story, and actor Steve McQueen were married in a city park Thursday by a justice of the peace. It was the second marriage for both Miss MacGraw, 34, and McQueen, 43.

Only persons attending the ceremony were McQueen's two sons, Terry, 14, and Chadwick, 12, and Miss MacGraw's, son, Joshua, 2.

WASHINGTON — The plane that carried baseball star Roberto Clemente to his death last New Year's Eve was overloaded, had two bad engines and had not been flown in four months, the National Transportation Safety Board said today.

The flight engineer was unqualified for his position and the co-pilot had a total of six hours in the type of plane being flown, the board added.

Clemente, an all-star outfielder for Pittsburgh Pirates, and four others died when the four-engine DC-7 crashed shortly after takeoff from Puerto Rico on a mercy flight to Managua, Nicaragua.

NEW YORK — A three-month-old girl who was separated from her dying Siamese twin sister last Saturday in an attempt to save her life has died.

Dr. Donald Kotz, head of the medical team attending the infant at Downstate Medical Centre in Brooklyn, said the three-pound child's death was due to "'a multiplicity of overwhelming complications."

The two girls, who were not identified, were joined from the navel to the breastbone and shared vital organs such as the liver, diaphragm and parts of the intestinal tract.

BUTCHART GARDENS. Known throughout the world for their incredible beauty. Romantic Night Lighting . . . spectacular Ross Fountains in their majestic "Ballet to the Stars" . . . Smashing Stage Shows . . . Floral Restaurant . . . Begonia Bower . . . Show Greenhouse . . . Fascinating Seed and Gift Shop. Open every day 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.

BUTCHART GARDENS — EVER CHANGING, ALWAYS LOVELY. Skillful planning, constant replanting, dedicated gardeners pooling their ideas and knowledge, keep them that way week after week, season after season. Developed from an old abandoned limestone quarry over half a century ago they have grown to become one of the world's most unusual, written about, talked about, admired gardens. Embracing over 30 acres, actually six gardens in one, fabulous Sunken Garden, Lake Garden, stately Italian, quaint Japanese, the great Stage Show Garden (now in full swing) and the English Rose Garden, especially gorgeous right now!

BUTCHART GARDENS ROMANTIC NIGHT LIGHTING. As darkness takes over, a thousand hidden lights combine with the moon and stars, the hills, trees and shrubs, lakes, lily ponds and fountains, to create a fairyland, softly scented by the flowers — a spectacle so unusual, so grand it's indescribable! Featuring the Sunken Garden and the spectacular Ross Fountains in their majestic "Ballet to the Stars." This alone is worth coming to see.

BUTCHART GARDENS FLORAL RESTAURANT. Open every day 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., serving delicious lunches, afternoon teas, and delightful buffet suppers in the evening. Continuous Snack and Coffee Bar service.

BUTCHART GARDENS SPARKLING ENTERTAINMENT. Staged in the midst of incredible beauty it's the highlight of Victoria's summer entertainment season.

MONDAYS, 8:30 p.m. "NICE 'N EASY" — Variety entertainment featuring Marge Bridgeman, Maura Hall, Murray McAlpine, Christopher Ross, Norm Watson, Betty Winter, Woody Woodland, and the "Butchart Buskers". Also the "Butchart Gardeners" 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m.

TUESDAYS, 8:30 p.m. "NICE 'N EASY" — Variety entertainment musical featuring Marge Bridgeman, John Dunbar, Maura Hall, Christopher Ross, Norm Watson, Betty Winter, Woody Woodland, and the "Butchart Buskers." Also the "Butchart Gardeners" 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. and the "Zingari" Puppets 7:00 and 7:45 p.m.

WEDNESDAYS. Same as Monday listing.

THURSDAYS, 8:30 p.m. SCOTTISH AND VARIETY NIGHT. Colourful Scottish Stage Show and Tattoo. Indoor Gardens Lots of Fun to Make

You live in an apartment without a balcony but have not yet succumbed to artificial plant material? You will have a lot of fun if you play around at making an indoor miniature garden.

Start inexpensively if you doubt your artistic talents. Invest in a second-hand glass fish bowl or a three-inch deep glazed or china dish as large as you can accommodate.

Try first for something so simple that you cannot fail. You will always improve and advance with practice.

Take the fish bowl first. Wash thoroughly and polish dry until the glass sparkles for your finished scene gains clarity from being viewed through the glass. In the bottom arrange two or three washed pieces of rough rock. Or a piece you find with lichen, moss or tiny ferns already growing on the rough surfaces.

If the bottom of the rock piece is too rough to stand firm, make a paper funnel and four fine sand into the bottom of the bowl, enough to hold the rock rigid.

When using two or more rock pieces, try for the same kind of rock and arrange to form one or more crevices.

Into one crevice press a small piece of a native sedum you'll find growing above tide line almost anywhere on the coast.

In another crevice a tiny piece of moss no bigger than a thimble will soon become established in a fish bowl. Choose moss from an open place not from shaded woodland.

Soaking the pieces of plant material with water before inserting them provides enough moisture for several weeks even without a glass cover on the opening. But be sure you drain excess moisture first or you get a messy bowl inside as you work.

A pair of sugar tongs are helpful in placing small plants inside glass bowls. I find a pair of Japanese chopsticks quite manageable for moving things around in a small area.

Look at what you have accomplished with the simplest materials. A miniature natural garden which will live and grow for months with less exertion than it takes to brush your teeth.

If you are using a shallow dish or tray you can be more imaginative, but first you need at least one inch of small stones or gravel as a moisture sump since there will be no holes for drainage.

You need also a mixture of sand and soil with either peat moss or stones according to the plants you choose.

Select small growing plants, not just small pieces of big plants. You must have things in scale as they grow, at least for a few months or a year.

Don't forget the appeal of foliage plants. They hold the interest long after a brief period of flowering.

Once you begin this hobby, the latent artist develops. You surprise yourself with a new talent to bring pleasure not only to yourself but to friends who, like you, are living where they cannot grow a living garden outdoors.

Golden Girl Spy to Die

BEIRUT (AP) — A "breathtaking" Egyptian beauty, charged with pulling the biggest espionage coup for Israel since the 1967 Middle East war, has been sentenced to death in a secret trial in Cairo, the Beirut magazine Al Hawadess reports.

The girl's fiance, an engineering colonel in charge of the Egyptian army installations department, was also sentenced to face a firing squad, Al Hawadess says in a dispatch from Cairo.

It quoted official Egyptian sources as saying both will be executed once Egyptian President Anwar Sadat approves the sentences.

Al Hawadess said the woman, identified as Hiba A.S., was recruited by Israel's secret service while she was majoring in literature at an un-named Paris university.

"For three years Hiba managed from Paris to maintain a constant flow of classified information about Egyptian armament to Israel, so much so that Israel treated her as its most valuable spy in the Middle East," Al Hawadess says.

Hiba was said to have made several trips to Tel Aviv and was once the guard of honor at a party given by Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan. The magazine said Dayan gave her a cheque for £100,000 sterling as a gift.

REMOVED STAMP

"Egypt's secret service caught up with Hiba accidentally, thanks to a dishonest post office employee in Cairo who removed a French stamp he admired from a post card addressed to Hiba's fiance and found a suspicious black spot beneath it," the magazine says.

It was a microdot containing a coded message that asked for detailed data about Egyptian missile bases.

The fiance was arrested, "but luring Hiba into Cairo proved difficult" until Egyptian agents flew to Tripoli and told her father, an engineer on loan to Libya, that Hiba had joined the Palestinian Black September organization and was about to take part in a dangerous operation.

"So he was easily persuaded to make a phone call to Hiba in Paris and convince her to fly to Tripoli the next day to see him before he died from an alleged heart ailment."

She was arrested at Tripoli airport and driven across the border to Egypt," Al Hawadess says.

Kirkman Scores Fifth Straight

SEATTLE (AP) — Boone Kirkman of Seattle, giving up five inches in height and 50 pounds in weight, won a unanimous decision Thursday night over Jack (the giant) O'Halloran, a heavyweight from San Diego, Calif.

It was a close fight with O'Halloran, 6-feet-6, 255-pounds, using his weight and reach advantage to push Kirkman away throughout much of the 10-round fight.

It was the fifth straight victory for Kirkman since he returned to the ring after a brief retirement. He now has a 27-2 record.

RECORD TRANSFER FEE PAID FOR MILAN STAR

MILAN, Italy (Reuter) — A. S. Roma has paid a world record transfer fee of 622 million lire (about $995,000) for A. C. Milan's star forward Pierino Prati, the Italian Football Association announced Wednesday.

The fee is two million lire (about $3,200) more than the previous highest when Juventus bought striker Pietro Anastasi from A. C. Varese in 1968.

Prati, 27, has been Italy's leading goalscorer in recent years, but injury kept him out of action for much of last season.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, which was played in the Life Masters Women's Pair Championship of 1972, our various South declarers were given the opportunity of indulging in deception—and it saved the day for most of them. Had the deal come up in a rubber-bridge game, it would have passed by unnoticed, for only an overtrick was at stake. But, since the game was duplicate bridge, the overtrick was all-important.

Neither side vulnerable, South deals.

◊ K Q 9
♣ 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ◊

At those tables where the overtrick was not made, East won the opening lead with the ace of diamonds, South following suit with the nine-spot. East now knew that West had led a singleton diamond, for if West had possessed the K-Q-7, the K-7, or the Q-7, she would not have led the seven at trick one. So, at trick two, East returned a diamond, which West ruffed. In time West made her ace of trumps.

At those tables where South made an overtrick, East captured the opening lead with the ace of diamonds—on which South dropped the king. As East now viewed the situation, West might well have led the seven-spot from an original holding of the tripleton Q-9-7. Since there was no valid reason to assume that South had falsecarded with the king, the various East defenders accepted South's king at face value: a singleton.

Since it seemed pointless to return a diamond, the East players then led a spade, hoping that partner could win a trick in this suit. It was to no avail. Declarer won the spade return and played a trump. All the defenders could make from here in, was West's ace of trumps.

South's falsecard of the king of diamonds was "on the house": it stood to gain everything by creating an erroneous impression in East's mind; and it could lose nothing, since the board's jack of diamonds would take care of declarer's nine-spot.

And so chicanery accomplished what honesty could not have, thus demonstrating that, at the bridge table, honesty is not always the best policy.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"I don't get your total," said Joe. "It's always just two cents less than three times what you made it."

Steve looked at the list, and laughed. "Your adding is okay, but what you call my total is quite wrong. You switched the dollars and the cents when you copied it from my notes."

What was the right total?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: MURDERS was 1570279 (odd).

SOOKE WINS BANTAM TITLE

Stephen Kennedy hit a three-run homer to spark Sooke to a 6-1 victory over Nanaimo in the final of the B.C. bantam boy's softball championship in Sooke last weekend.

Sooke finished the four-team, double-loss elimination tournament with three straight wins while Nanaimo was second with a 2-1 win-loss record.

Campbell River, with one victory, placed third and Riversdale of Surrey was fourth

Stars Rally, Pilic Leaves Swiss Event

BAASTAD, Switzerland (AP) — Stan Smith, the United States' top player and 17-year-old Bjorn Borg, Sweden's young star, rallied for second-round victories Thursday in the $75,000 Swiss International tennis championships, while Yugoslavia's Nikki Pilic bowed out.

Smith played dismally in the first set before beating Geoff Masters of Australia 1-6, 7-6, 6-2. Borg, the favorite of the partisan crowd, also dropped the first set, then overcame Jan Kukal of Czechoslovakia 6-7, 7-6, 6-3.

Pilic, the centre of a controversy that caused some 70 members of the Asociation of Tennis Professionals to boycott the recent Wimbledon tournament, was trailing Australia's Bob Carmichael 4-6, 6-3, 1-0 before withdrawing.

Favors Must Be Repaid —Lewis

OTTAWA (CP) — Financial backing of the Liberal and Progressive Conservative parties by large corporations inevitably means those parties are obligated to repay the favor, New Democrat leader David Lewis alleged in the Commons Thursday.

Lewis criticized the two major political parties, saying that "when a party is able to collect several millions of dollars . . . it is bound to be affected and influenced by the source of that money."

He spoke during debate on a bill to limit spending by candidates and parties during election campaigns. Second reading of the bill was approved and now goes to committee for detailed study.

Lewis welcomed the provision that the source of all donations of $100 or more must be made public.

"The people of a democracy are entitled to know the source of funds used at election time and between elections."

He also endorsed the provision that candidates' spending be limited to $1 for each of the first 15,000 registered voters in a riding, 50 cents for each of the next 10,000 and 25 cents for each additional voter.

"Elections ought not to be the property of those who can get the largest sums of money."

The NDP leader said the bill should be tightened before it passes but he would not risk killing it by adding strings to the NDP pledge of support.

He was particularly critical of a clause requiring candidates to poll at least 20 per cent of the vote before qualifying for reimbursement of some expenses from the federal treasury.

If it were cut to 10 per cent, he said, it still would have the desired effect of cutting out "freak or nuisance candidates" who do not run serious campaigns.

Conservative spokesman George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings) also approved of the control measures, saying candidates in the heat of a campaign often spend twice or three times as much as they originally planned.

Air Union Back on Job

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air machinists returned to their jobs Thursday at Vancouver International Airport after a four-hour walkout.

"CP Air members of the International Association of Machinists walked off the job at 11 a.m. for what they called a study session," said Jim McKeachie, CP Air's public relations manager for western Canada.

Cancellations of a Montreal-bound flight was "linked" to the walkout, said McKeachie. Twelve other flights were affected.

Policeman Charged In Deaths

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Police Constable Merle Smith, attached to Toronto's mounted unit, was charged early today on two counts of non-capital murder following the shooting deaths of his wife and an Orillia building contractor near here Thursday.

Constable Merle, 43, has been remanded in custody until July 18 when he will appear in provincial court in Brechin.

The shootings occurred at a beach cottage six miles south of Orillia. Neighbors heard numerous shots and later found the bodies of Agnes Smith, 40, and Joseph Chiavetti, 44, a prominent Orillia construction company owner.

First reports indicated that Mr. Chiavetti was shot once in the cottage and again after he struggled to his car. The front window of the car had been shattered by a bullet.

Several eye-witnesses have been interviewed by police, it is reported, but no further details have been released.

Constable Smith has been a member of the Metro force for 23 years.

PM Vows Conflict Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau countered opposition charges of government wrong-doing Thursday by renewing a promise to introduce guides on conflict of interest before the Commons adjourns for the summer, expected later this month.

His statement came as opposition members confronted the Liberals with charges of conflict of interest involving the daughter of a cabinet minister, renting government office space and financing of student housing projects.

Mr. Trudeau said a public inquiry will be appointed if necessary to look into details surrounding construction of four co-operative student housing projects in Ontario.

The allegation that the same builders and architects were involved in construction of Rochdale, Neill-Wycik and Tartu colleges in Toronto and Pestalozzi College in Ottawa was made in the Commons Monday by Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North).

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford repeated Thursday that in February he had ordered an internal investigation of the projects, financed partially through Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC).

NOTHING UNEARTHED

Mr. Trudeau said there is "nothing at this point" in the CMHC investigation to indicate a public inquiry is needed.

He also said he had not spoken to Stanley Haidasz, minister of state for multiculturalism, about an Opportunities for Youth (OFY) project linked with Dr. Haidasz's daughter, Marie.

The girl was one of a group that applied for a grant to conduct a study of the Polish community in Dr. Haidasz's Toronto Parkdale riding. The first proposal was turned down but a later one with a smaller budget of $15,400, was approved. However, Miss Haidasz, 18, had left the group by then.

Mr. Trudeau said he did not think the incident involved a conflict of interet. Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner, responsible for the OFY program, said the charge was "totally without substance."

New Democrat Leader David Lewis said he did not think the OFY application was itself a conflict of interest but the fact that the $15,000 was to be used "for propaganda purposes in the riding of the minister" was.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield told reporters he had doubts the incident is a true conflict of interest but rules on conflict of interest for government members were long overdue.

Perrin Beatty (PC—Wellington - Grey - Dufferin - Waterloo) sought consent of the Commons for a motion asking the government to start a judicial inquiry into rental of downtown Ottawa office space by the health department while government House Leader Allan MacEachen was health minister between 1965 and 1968.

Mr. Beatty said the inquiry should determine the relationship between A. I. Rosenberg of Kitchener, Ont., principal officer of the rental company, the Liberal Federation of Canada and Mel McInnis, then a special assistant to Mr. MacEachen.

Mr. McInnis now is special assistant to Dr. Haidasz.

Mr. MacEachen told the Commons he had checked and found the rental was made through the public works department, which is responsible for acquiring government office space.

He advised Mr. Beatty "to get all the facts" before making charges in the House.

The prime minister said he would bring forward before the summer recess "a bill in draft form or the substance of a bill on the matter of conflict of interest as it concerns members of Parliament." The Commons is expected to adjourn before the end of July.

9 IN MEMORIAM

LAIRD — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Agnes Laird who passed away July 13th, 1971.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember her who once was here
And who, though absent is just as dear.

—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by Doug, Adele and Merv.

Friday Movies and Specials

Movies

Lloyds of London (xxx), on 12 at 8. An engrossing, exciting and well-made story of the famous English banking firm describing its early history and rise of prominence around the time of the battle of Trafalgar. Made in 1936, the movie stars Tyrone Power, Madelaine Carroll and Freddie Bartholomew.

Lieutenant Shuster's Wife (xxx), on 8 at 8:30. Emmy-winning actress Lee Grant plays a policeman's widow trying to find out who killed him and whether he was on the take in this 1972 TV drama.

Operation Kid Brother (xx), on 5 at 9. On-location filming in Morocco, Spain and Monaco highlights this otherwise routine Italian-made 1967 James Bond-type adventure starring Sean Connery's brother Neil.

Experiment in Terror, (xxx), on 7 at 9. A high-tension thriller about a girl and her sister terrorized by a criminal with a plan to pull a robbery, while the FBI frantically tries to prevent tragedy. Made in 1962, the film stars Glenn Ford and Lee Remick.

Where Love Has Gone (x), on 12 at 9. An embarrassingly bad 1964 sex drama based on Harold Robbins' novel about a famous sculptress whose lover is stabbed to death. Susan Hayward and Bette Davis star in what can only be described as a contest to see who can give the worst performance.

Catherine the Great (xxx), on 13 at 10. An elaborate, but heavy-handed historical drama, made in 1934 and starring Elizabeth Bergner and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. It tells of how Catherine is forced into a marriage she does not wish, with resulting unhappiness.

Seance on a Wet Afternoon (xxxx), on 12 at 11:20. Kim Stanley and Richard Attenborough star in this brilliantly written, directed and acted 1964 drama about a professional medium on the brink of insanity, who involves her weak husband in a kidnapping plot.

War of the Colossal Beast (x), on 7 at 11:30. Routine 1958 sci-fi.

My Favourite Spy (xxx), on 11 at 11:30. A fast-paced and generally entertaining 1951 comedy that has Bob Hope playing a dual role as a burlesque comic who's a double for a spy. Hedy Lamarr and Francis L. Sullivan co-star.

Father Was a Fullback (xx), on 2 at 11:50. Fred McMurray and Maureen O'Hara star in this 1949 comedy about a football coach whose team has a habit of losing all its games.

Lieutenant Shuster's Wife (xxx), on 6 at midnight. (See earlier for details.)

Assignment — Outer Space (x), on 8 at midnight. A gimmicky, English-dubbed 1962 sci-fi tale about a space ship out of control that threatens to destroy the earth.

Tiberius (x), on 13 at midnight. A fictionalized Italian-made biography of the Roman emperor, filmed in 1966 and starring Abbe Lane.

Teen-age Caveman (x), on 7 at 12:55. Actor Robert Vaughn would probably like to forget this silly 1958 sci-fi tale about prehistoric times, made before his TV and film success.

Pride of the Blue Grass (xx), on 4 at 1. Routine 1954 race track story starring Lloyd Bridges and Vera Miles.

The Amazing Transparent Man (xx), on 8 at 1:30. Science fiction blends with crime in this 1960 movie about a scientist who invents a serum that makes men transparent, then tries it out on a bank robber.

A Target for Killing (xx), on 12 at 1:50. A secret agent tries to prevent an heiress from being murdered in this 1966 German-made thriller starring Stewart Granger and Molly Peters.

CBC Radio Highlights

July 13

6:30 (FM) Radio International — An evening devoted to the late Noel Coward, including: The First and Only Noel — a tribute including comments and reminiscences by his friends and acquaintances (among them Sir John Gielgud, Kenneth Williams and Michael MacLiammoir), and also by Noel Coward himself.

8:03 (AM) Between Ourselves — Niagara, The Peninsula With a Falls, a fond look at the past with Bill McNeil. Since they were first discovered in 1678, the Falls have been a mecca for people from all over the world. Various residents tell what it is like to live there, and recall events in its history.

9:03 (FM) The Bush and the Salon — Journeys to the Island of St. John. The accounts of two different voyages to the Island of St. John, now known as Prince Edward Island, one made about 200 years ago by Thomas Curtis of Hampshire, England; and the other made some 45 years later by Walter Johnstone of Dumfries, Scotland.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — Part 1: Inscape and Landscape: The sixth and final talk in last year's series of Massey Lectures by Dr. Pierre Dansereau. Implementation is the title of Dr. Dansereau's last talk in which he describes a variety of inscape-landscape patterns.

Part 2: Joyous Austerity — How and for Whom? Dr. Dansereau discusses his lectures with a panel of guests.

Can't Exceed Terms: M-B

PORT ALBERNI — MacMillan Bloedel officials said today they cannot agree to wage rates or terms of employment for two striking unions at the company's newsprint and pulp mill which exceed those granted to production workers in a third union.

The company was making its first comment since the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW), Local 2354, and the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 15, struck simultaneously last Tuesday.

The mill was closed one week ago when unofficial picketing began by members of two locals of the United Paperworkers International Union (UPIU).

The UPIU walkout involving 1,100 production workers ended Tuesday when it was announced that UPIU members at 11 B.C. mills had accepted a new two-year contract by a 57-per cent majority. The Port Alberni workers, who walked out in dissatisfaction with the new contract, had voted against it.

Immediately after the B.C. vote was announced, the 58 electricians and 57 office workers started a legal strike. Production workers refused to cross the picket lines.

MacMillan Bloedel said the electricians are "demanding some form of premium pay above that agreed upon for the other mill tradesmen."

The last offer to the office employees, the company said, "met the 8.5 per cent wage adjustment granted to UPIU in each year of a two-year agreement."

Joe Laminski, president of IBEW Local 2354, said his union isn't against the wage increase of 8.5 per cent in each year as accepted by UPIU.

However, the union is asking for a bonus for electrical workers with tradesmen's qualifications, service pay based on length of employment and clarification of the relationship between working foremen and load hands, he said.

Bill Swanson, business agent for the office employees, said the company had offered increases averaging 7.8 per cent in the first year and 8.5 per cent in the second year of a two-year contract.

The union wants a wage increase of 12 per cent in a one-year contract with a $75-a-month minimum increase, he said.

The mill normally produces 1,200 tons a day of newsprint and 250 to 450 tons a day of pulp. Its closure has forced the layoff of 240 sawmill workers in the company's Somass A mill which depends on the pulp and paper mill for steam power.

Sense of Taste, Smell Valued at $7,594

WINNIPEG (CP) — A court has awarded $7,594 in damages to a young farmer who lost his sense of taste and his sense of smell after being struck on the head.

The court ordered William Friesen to pay the damages to Ronald Wychenka, who suffered a fractured head in a scuffle April 8, 1972, outside the St. Pierre Hotel.

Mr. Justice John Solomon, in making the Court of Queen's Bench award, said Wychenka will never again be able to savor the smell of flowers or the taste of food.

Muskeg Oil Spill

REDWATER, Alta. (CP) — About 200 barrels of crude oil spilled onto muskeg from a broken feeder line at Imperial Oil's Simmons oilfield, the company announced Thursday.

A spokesman said the spill was spotted late Wednesday and the cleanup was completed Thursday at the site, 40 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Water Ills Queried

GIBBONS, Alta. (CP) — A family from this town, 20 miles northeast of Edmonton, is undergoing tests to determine whether a series of common illnesses is being caused by the town's water supply.

Henry and Edith Eichner and their children, Hernie, 17, Matt, 16, Barbara, 15. Gabriele, 13, and Susan, 11 are taking tests at University Hospital to pinpoint the origin of their lack of energy, nervousness, car sickness and other symptons which began last fall, about a year after they moved to Gibbons.

They also are being tested for Addison's Disease, characterized by dizziness, low blood pressure and loss of weight.

Mrs. Eichner said in an interview the family's health has improved since it started drinking sterilized water, about two weeks ago.

Death Blame Denied

EDMONTON (CP) — The death of a man who was turned away from the city-owned Royal Alexandra Hospital had nothing to do with a strike by 1,030 non-professional workers there, the hospital's executive director Bob Rosser said Thursday.

He said in an interview that the incident was a matter of medical judgment at another hospital.

The man was brought to the Royal Alexandra with chest pains but the emergency ward was closed and he was referred to the General Hospital, also in the city. He was examined there, and apparently was told he was not sick enough to be admitted. He died the next morning.

Leased Land Scheme Starts Next Spring

Construction of new housing under a B.C. government program for provision of leased land should start as soon as next spring, Lorne Nicolson, minister responsible for housing, said Thursday.

Nicolson was elaborating on a statement he made earlier Thursday, announcing the government's intention to get into the provision of moderately-priced housing on leased land on University of B.C. Endowment lands, on Burnaby Mountain and on the Blair Rifle Range in North Vancouver.

He said Greater Vancouver is not the only location where this housing program will take effect and that some places, such as Kamloops, could have housing units available before Vancouver.

Nicolson also said legislation will likely be introduced at the legislative session in the spring of 1974 to control speculation in housing that is put up through the government program.

The new minister outlined his plan in this way:

An individual would obtain a lease for a parcel of land in one of the locations where provincial government land is available. Nicolson mentioned a lease price of about $3,000 but could not be firm.

The individual would then either build a house on the property or have the house built for him by a private develloper, who would have obtained permission from the government to provide housing units in the $24,000 to $36,000 range for two- or four-bedroom units.

Servicing of the land will be done by the municipalities involved, but will be paid for by the provincial government, or in cases where the land to be leased is jointly owned by federal and provincial governments, the costs of the servicing may also be shared.

The type of housing will be mixed, Nicolson said. There will be some high-level structures, some high-density subdivisions and other varieties of housing, including perhaps some row housing.

In some cases, density could be as high as nine units per acre, Nicolson said, compared with traditional density of six per acre or even 4½ per acre.

Leases would be for 50 or 60 years and could go either to individuals or to co-operative groups.

The minister acknowledged that there may be problems for the government in attempting to keep the market values of units constructed on leased land within the scope of the average wage-earner.

In this regard, he said, legislation will be introduced.

The actual controlling of speculation may be done through regulations connected with the legislation, he said, adding that the government will require some time to work out details.

"We have not resolved how much control we will put on transferrals of these units," he said.

As for other locations for possible availability of government leased land, Nicolson mentioned Kamloops as the area with plans developed to the greatest degree.

He said Kamloops officials are coming up with a plan for a development, which, if approved by his department, should lead directly to calling for tenders for servicing of the land.

Other communities mentioned by Nicolson were Port McNeil, Gold River and Campbell River on Vancouver Island and Williams Lake on the mainland.

As for the Greater Victoria area, Nicolson said he has yet to meet with area mayors, although he is aware that Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis has a plan for development of some property in that municipality.

Retired Teacher Head Chosen

H. F. Hyson, 2646 Musgrave, has been elected president of the 360-member Victoria chapter of the B.C. Retired Teachers' Association.

Other officers are: Ed Reid, vice-president; Hazel Hodson, secretary; Louise Reynolds, treasurer; Lillian Smithurst, chairman of the visiting committee and Miss L. E. Kinley, social committee chairman.

CITY VOTES AID TO CO-OP HOUSING

Victoria city council voted financial and moral support Thursday for a co-operative housing project in Victoria West.

Pioneer Co-operative Housing Association will receive a grant of $1,440 a year during the period in which the group is paying off its mortgage on a 61-unit complex of townhouses and apartments to be built at McCaskill and Langford.

"It's an indication that our hearts are in the project even if our pocketbook is small," said Ald. Mike Young.

Only Ald. Tom Christie objected to the grant.

"Certainly co-op housing should be supported, but it should be the federal and provincial government who do it. They have the taxing power, not the city that has only one way to raise money . . . through property taxes," he said.

He said the city is "already spending a considerable amount on welfare" and should not get involved in the subsidizing of low-cost housing.

Ald. Alf Hood, who is the city's liaison with the co-op, defended the grant.

"The city of Victoria is doing very little in this matter of housing," he said, "We would be very, very negligent in our responsibility if we just sat back and let people struggle on their own in an effort to find adequate housing."

He noted the grant amounted to only $120 per unit per year.

Marysville Destination Unknown

A group of Americans, charged in connection with the discovery of $1 million worth of hashish and marijuana, left Victoria Thursday for an unknown destination.

Headed by Alexander deRenzy, 37, the 13 crew members were aboard the former U.S. minesweeper Marysville when she left the armed forces' fuelling base at Colwood about 6 p.m.

The six men and seven women were recently released on bail from North Vancouver, where they are charged with conspiracy to possess hashish for the purpose of trafficking and conspiracy to import narcotics.

DeRenzy's bail has been set at $7,500 and the others at $750 each. They are to appear Tuesday in court at North Vancouver.

Dave Staples, RCMP drug squad head in Victoria, says he does not know where the 184-foot Marysville is headed.

If the 13 returned to the United States, he says, it would be an almost-hopeless proposition to get them extradited to Canada.

Hay Shortage Forecast in B.C.

A shortage of hay is expected in British Columbia this winter and farmers and ranchers should harvest as much forage material as possible during the summer months, the department of agriculture warned today in a bulletin.

Field crops commissioner C. H. Nelson said that a hard winter followed by cool, dry weather this spring has reduced forage yields in many interior districts by as much as 50 per cent.

In a normal year, the province imports up to 70,000 tons of alfalfa from the United States, mainly for use in the Fraser Valley but this year Washington State and Alberta are both facing similar shortages, he said.

"B.C. farmers in all districts are advised to salvage all possible forage material from forage seed crops, native meadows or wasteland," said the bulletin.

"Second growth should be fertilized and, wherever possible, irrigation facilities should be utilized to the fullest extent. Those farmers faced with shortages should make every effort to locate supplies now."

ISRAELI, SYRIAN GUNS, TANKS DUEL

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israeli military officials reported all quiet today on the frontier with Syria, where Israeli gunners fought a 20-minute duel with three Syrian tanks Thursday. It was the most serious clash there in more than seven months.

The Israeli command said two of the tanks that opened fire on positions in the Golan Heights area after sunset Thursday were damaged by land mines. No casualties were reported on either side.

Demonstrators Held

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six persons were arrested inside the White House Tuesday and charged with unlawful entry after kneeling prayer during public tours, the Secret Service said. Service spokesman John Warner said he did not know the motive for the protests and reported that none of the six acknowledged membership in any religious organization.

ARCTIC CRASH SUIT

EDMONTON (CP) — A statement of claim for general damages was filed in Alberta Supreme Court Thursday against an Edmonton airline and Marten Hartwell, pilot and lone survivor of a controversial Arctic plane crash.

The statement was filed by the estate of British nurse Judy Hill, one of the passengers killed in the crash of a twin-engine Beechcraft 18 piloted by Hartwell. It lists 12 examples of alleged negligence against Gateway Aviation, Hartwell's employer, and the pilot.

The statement alleges the crash would not have occurred if the defendants had exercised proper care in the maintenance, operation and navigation of the aircraft.

Edmonton lawyer Philip Ketchum, solicitor for the nurse's estate, said the claim is for loss of expectation of life and amenities of life.

The Toronto Sun and CHQT Edmonton said in a copyright story that Toronto lawyer Jim Karswick has been instructed by the Eskimo Brotherhood to "proceed with action in a court of the Northwest Territories for compensation for the lives of Mrs. Neemee Nulliayok and David Kootook . . ." who also died.

Tentative Accord In Fishing Strike

Tentative agreement was reached at noon today on new salmon prices for 3,500 union fishermen on the British Columbia coast.

Negotiations were continuing early this afternoon between the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Fisheries Association of B.C. over 3,000 shoreworkers and 500 tendermen and both sides were reported very close to a tentative contract settlement for these two groups.

Hope was being expressed that fishing could resume on the weekend.

First word of a break in the week-long industry strike came from Ken Campbell, manager of the fisheries association, the bargaining agency for 14 companies.

He said the UFAWU fishermen will be voting on the latest salmon price offer and he said the union is recommending acceptance.

"We made some adjustments on pinks and chums and the welfare plan," he said.

Sockeye and coho price offers remained the same as before, he added. This was 50 cents a pound this year for sockeye and 52 cents next year (the union was asking 52 cents and 57 cents) and 40 cents and 42 cents for Coho, where the union was seeking 47 and 51 cents.

There was no immediate comment available from the UFAWU.

"We're hopeful that we can get it all settled and fishing can resume Sunday night, said Campbell.

Both sides had bargained late into Thursday evening and then again this morning in Vancouver following a 58 per cent rejection by fishermen of the last salmon price offer, which had been described as final by the association.

In the shoreworkers dispute, it was understood that the issue of the flexible weekend had been settled and that the association had offered a further 10 cents an hour to the $1.10 offer made earlier, which was rejected by union members.

In Victoria, meanwhile, UFAWU pickets were at Dennis Shellfish Company Limited, 4 Huron, and at the Sooke fish dock where Coast Shellfish Company Limited, 5871 Sooke Road, lands fish.

Scotty Neish, secretary of UFAWU Local 24, said Dennis Shellfish is icing Pacific Trollers Association boats and handling fresh fish and Coast Shellfish has been unloading fish since the strike started.

Both companies are non-union but Neish said the UFAWU "regards the produce as hot." The union had warned before the strike started that it would picket any place handling fish caught after the walkout began.

Meanwhile, three of British Columbia's five major sockeye salmon spawning areas are in imminent danger of being seriously overspawned, an official of the federal fisheries service warned Thursday.

The official, Maury Houghton, said salmon escaping the nets and lines of striking B.C. fishermen are entering the Skeena and Nass Rivers and Smith Inlet systems in numbers greater than the areas can handle.

He said if fishing doesn't take place in the three inlets by next week , the early runs through them will be a "total loss' to fishermen and, equally serious, arrive at their spawning grounds at virtually full strength.

Young Have Faith In Future

By JACK SCOTT, Times Staff

(Last of a Series)

TOKYO — I'd shared a concern for the future of Japan with most of the leading Japanese I'd interviewed, but the dinner with the students, two days before my departure for home, changed all that.

I'd asked my guide to invite two or three graduating students from any of the 85 universities in Tokyo. With typical Japanese over-efficiency, he brought along seven. It didn't matter. It only made me surer that the future of Japan is not nearly as bleak as their more apprehensive elders would have you believe.

My notes hardly matter, either, except possibly for the remark of one of the three pretty girls in the party who told me very firmly, "No, sir, we're not losing our identity. We are living more like you westerners every day because that's the better way to live. But we are thinking more like Japanese every day because, for us, that's the better way to think."

I found them conservative, confident, even a little cocky in a cool sort of way.

All seven of them, it turned out, were being wooed by major companies who seek the brightest young people as executive potential. In labor-short Japan some firms recruit promising youngsters by offering them trips abroad and training courses at seaside resorts that include Zen meditation, conversational English, the writing of Haiku and instruction in the tea ceremony.

"Render service to your country and your society," one company urges in a brochure for students. "Manufacture glass!"

Katsuji Kawamata, the old lion president of the Nissan Motor Co., perhaps using a western adviser's phrase, had said earlier, "We do everything but the proverbial soft shoe to attract and keep good minds."

Except that they excelled in English, my dinner guests were not hand-picked for their views. They're typical of the 1,750,000 students in 900 Japanese universities who are getting a higher education. Fewer than two per cent are activists in any way, though it might seem a larger number to the guards at the U.S. embassy in downtown Tokyo. Marijuana smokers or —heaven forbid!—users of hard drugs are all but unknown. The long-haired hippie type is so rare that the Japanese haven't yet invented a word for them. There is such a close family feeling that few young men or women leave home until they're married.

These students, like most of the other three-and-a-half million in the educational pipeline, will invest in a briefcase or cover-alls the moment their schooling is finished to go directly into a business or a factory where, chances are, they'll remain for life. They have absolute faith in their future.

While the pundits in the mass-circulation dailies retail doom and gloom over the political future my guests readily admitted only apathy and indifference. They seemed interested solely in taking their place in a stable, affluent and expanding economy. In a society where a baby is born every 16 seconds (and an adult dies every 46 seconds) they represent a new generation that has no fears about what lies ahead.

It's hard to fault them for their boredom with politics. What passes here for a "political crisis" is, it turns out, largely a matter of the lead-

Campora Steps Aside

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Hector Campora resigned today to allow new Argentine elections that appeared certain to return to power Juan Peron, ousted by a military coup in 1955.

In a nationally broadcast speech, Campora said:

I have always had very" clear in my conscience the conviction that my election was for no other reason than to restore to Gen. Peron the mandate that was taken from him unjustly."

Campora and Vice-President Vicente Solano Lima signed their resignations in the Pink House, the official palace. Both houses of Congress were to approve them later today.

The dramatic move followed a sudden call from moderate union leaders that Peron resume his long-interrupted leadership. He returned from exile June 20 after Campora, his hand-picked stand-in, won elections from which Peron was disqualified.

Argentina was calm today despite bitter opposition from some leftist factions of Peronism who felt the sequence of events would bring more conservative government and weaken their stance.

Elections were expected to follow in 40 days, open to all parties but almost certain to be won by a coalition ticket of Peron and Ricardo Balbin, 68-year-old leader of Argentina's second-largest party, the Radical Civic Union.

Balbin, 68, was jailed for a year during Peron's 1946-55 dictatorship and ran second to Campora in the presidential election last March. His presence on the ticket with Peron would increase public opposition to any attempt to block the election.

Campora had been unable since his inauguration May 25 to suppress feuding among the diverse factions in the Peronist movement.

Canadian Content Ads Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Juneau announced Thursday that the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) is seeking regulations that would, in effect, ban foreign commercials from Canadian airwaves.

At a meeting of the Senate transport and communications committee, Juneau said the CRTC feels that regulations governing commercials are necessary. He is CRTC chairman.

He said the regulations will call for 100 per cent Canadian production of radio commercials, and Canadian content in television advertising will be "as close to 100 per cent as possible."

The Senate committee was considering a motion by Senator Sydney Buckwold (L—Saskatchewan) to ban foreign advertising in broadcasting.

Juneau said the regulation will be modelled on those now covering programming. Television and radio program content must be at least 60 per cent Canadian over a set period and never less than 50 per cent during any part of that period.

Jail Terms 'Illegal'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hundreds of young people now jailed in British Columbia for federal offences may be serving illegal sentences as a result of a far-reaching decision Thursday by the B.C. Court of Appeal which held that a vital portion of the federal prisons act is unconstitutional.

In a 2-1 decision that could also affect similar cases in Ontario, the appeal court held that section 150 of the Prison and Reformatories Act, which provides for an indefinite sentence along with a definite one, was inoperative in B.C. because it denied an accused equality before the law and contravened the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Crown Counsel George Murray said he has been instructed to appeal the decision to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The prisons act is in effect in only B.C. and Ontario and is designed to make it possible for a judge, at his own discretion, to give persons under 22 years of age an indefinite sentence along with a definite one following conviction of a federal offence.

The act is designed for rehabilitation purposes and puts the onus on the offender, by his own behavior in jail, to determine largely how much of the indefinite term he serves after completing the definite portion.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz and Mr. Justice A. E. Branca allowed the appeal of Patrick Dale Burnshine, 17, who was sentenced to three months definite and two years less a day indefinite last Dec. 19 following conviction in county court in Vancouver of creating a disturbance.

Vancouver lawyer D. J. Sorochan, representing Burnshine, told the court the potential total of the definite and indefinite sentence amount to 27 months. Had his client been charged for the same offence under the Criminal Code of Canada, the maximum sentence the court could have imposed was six months definite plus a possible fine.

He argued successfully that the county court judge had no jurisdiction to impose the definite and indefinite sentence because the prisons act contravened the Canadian Bill of Rights in that, had his client been charged in any one of the eight Canadian provinces other than B.C. or Ontario, he would have received the lesser sentence allowable under the Criminal Code, which does not provide for indeterminate sentences in such cases.

The appeal was fought entirely on constitutional grounds with Mr. Justice Branca and Mr. Justice Ne-

NIXON ILL

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon is in hospital suffering what White House doctors have diagnosed as viral pneumonia.

He is expected to remain "at least a week," Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said, but "will carry on his necessary work."

The 60-year-old president was reported ill and entered Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland Thursday night, after carrying on a day-long schedule despite reported discomfort.

White House physician Dr. Walter Tkach said he foresees "no complications," and that "rest and recuperation are the primary treatment."

DATSUN PLANT CONSIDERED FOR SEATTLE

SEATTLE (AP) — The Japanese car firm Nissan is considering Seattle as a site for a basic automobile assembly plant, John Anderson, a spokesman for Seattle-King County Economic Development Council said Thursday.

Last fall the company announced plans for a Datsun plant in B.C. but by December said there would be indefinite delay and possibly no plant at all.

Final decision on the Seattle plant is expected within the year. Anderson said a number of Japanese companies are looking at the U.S. as a place for plants because of the devalued dollar.

CZ Earnings Increase 137%

VANCOUVER CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. Thursday reported a 27 per cent increase in sales and a 137 per cent increase in net earnings for the first six months of 1973.

Sales for the period totalled $144.7 million, up from $113.5 million for the January-June period of 1972. Net earnings climbed to $14 million from $5.9 million.

Earnings per share equalled $1.77, compareed to 74 cents before extraordinary items a year ago.

Company President Robert Rogers said the earnings picture reflected continued strong demand for pulp, paper and wood products.

He said earnings for the full year of 1973 should exceed the best previous year by a considerable margin. Previous best for Crown Zellerbach Canada was 1964, when the company earned $15.1 million.

Pipe Clears Senate

WASHINGTON (CP) — The last major roadblock to a proposed trans-Alaska oil pipeline bill — an amendment calling for consideration of a Canadian route —was defeated today on the floor of the United States Senate.

The senators, voting mainly along east-west regional lines, defeated the measure 61 to 29.

The Senate immediately went on to consider other minor amendments, none of which was seen as a threat to the basic legislation proposed by Senator Henry Jackson (Dem.—Wash.) which comes up for a vote Tuesday.

The amendment was put forward by Senator Walter Mondale (Dem.—Minn.) who told his colleagues in a bitter floor debate preceding the vote that if Jackson's bill is passed "it will end up for years in court."

The Mondale amendment calls for a year's delay in pipeline construction to permit a study of a possible alternative line across Canada. The main Jackson bill would immediately remove restrictive right-of-way provisions in current federal law, but would leave construction of the proposed 800-mile, $3.5-billion Alaska line subject to court delay on environmental grounds.

Mondale suggested an independent study by the national Academy of Sciences to circumvent any judicial review.

Meanwhile, the U.S. state department denied there had been any effort to hold back information from congress on the Canadian government attitude toward construction of a pipeline for Alaskan oil.

100 in Queue for Neighborhood Pubs

More than 100 applications have been made for neighborhood pubs in the province—but the Liquor Control Board needs government clarification of regulations before it can act on the requests.

Liquor board secretary Gerald Devine said today the unofficial applications—"between 100 and 200'—have been received in the form of letters from all over B.C., including Victoria.

But the main problem encountered by the board to date, Devine said, has been the lack of description from the provincial government of what a neighborhood pub will be.

"We hate to do it, but so many letters are coming in, we are having to send a form letter out—telling them their letter is on file," he said.

Legislation passed at the spring session of the legislature set up a new type of liquor licence, called a "general licence." It is defined as allowing for "the sale and consumption on the establishment of liquor by the glass and light refreshments."

At the time the legislation was introduced, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said this would be the licence category under which the popular concept of neighborhood pubs would fall. But before any further action can be taken regarding the actual letting up of such facilities, regulations outlining the rules to be followed in the operation of the facilities must be written and published by the government.

Devine said that since the B.C. Liquor Board was formally established by proclamation on July 1, regulations can be expected sometime soon. He said they will either come directly from the attorney-general's department or from the three-man liquor board which was named last month.

The form letters sent to those persons applying to the board for neighborhood pub licences say their inquiries are a little premature and advises them to wait until the regulations specify exactly what a neighborhood pub is.

In the meantime, the board continues to process routine licence applications for other types of liquor facilities, including dining lounges, lounges and public houses, Devine said.

HEALTH CHIEF GETS $33,000

The chairman of the B.C. Medical Services Commission, Geoff Stewart, has received a 27 per cent salary increase from the provincial government, boosting his annual pay to $33,000. (See also Page 11).

Stewart's former salary was $26,000 per year. The increase is retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year.

The salary hike was made public in a Cabinet order-in-council released today.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybeans and soybean meal future advanced the limit allowed for one session on the Board of Trade Friday.

A 10-cent limit move in the corn pit early in the session was trimmed by profit-taking. Wheat futures, up 8½ cents early, closed some seven cents higher. Oats advanced around two cents.

Soybean oil prices were up from 30 points.

The demand for soybeans, meal, corn and wheat was strong from the opening and after the limit had been touched trade slowed to a virtual standstill.

Several times, however, prices moved off the limits in very thin trade, but returned to the top again.

At the close, soybeans were up the limit of 40 cents in all options except the expiring July which ended up at its limit, 80 cents, and 8.67. Corn was up nine cents, July 2.42. Wheat was up a cent, July 2.89 and oats were up around 2 cents, July new 96 cents.

CALGARY LIVESTOCK

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. from the Calgary Public Stockyards showed sales of 275 head, mostly replacement steers. Trade was active.

There were insufficient slaughter steers or heifers on offer to establish a market. The few cows on offer were sold steady with sales to 34.70. Bulls were fully steady with sales to 41.80.

Cows, D1, D2: 33-34.20. D3: 31-32.75. D4: 29-30.50.

Bulls, good: 38-41.

Replacement cattle were mostly fleshy shortkeep steers weighing 800 to 950 pounds, selling at steady prices.

There were insufficient good stock calves on offer to establish quotations. Good feeder steers 566 to 750 pounds: 47-54. More than 750 pounds: 44-48.20. Good feeder heifers more than 600 pounds: 40-44.

Hogs F.O.B. Calgary average base price: 52.75.

Diplomatic Posts Filled by Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The first resident high commissioner to Bangladesh and three other new ambassadorial posts are among 17 diplomatic appointments announced by the external affairs department.

Robert McLaren, 46, an Asia specialist in the Canadian International Development Agency, becomes high commissioner to Bangladesh. Since Bangladesh won independence in 1971 after war with Pakistan, Canada's ambassador to Thailand has been accredited high commissioner to the new Commonwealth country.

Frank Clark, 55, of Dryden, Ont., becomes the first ambassador to the Philipppines. A member of the trade commissioner service since 1948, he was named consul-general in Manila in 1970 and became charge d'affaires when the post became an embassy in 1972.

Lawrence Smith, 43, is to be the first high commissioner to Barbados.

John Stiles, 55, formerly of the trade commissioner service and now high commissioner to Guyana, becomes the first ambassador to Korea.

Other appointments include:

Robert Adams, 44, now assistant deputy minister of immigration, is to be consul-general in San Francisco.

J. Alan Beesley, 45, legal adviser to the external affairs department and a leading expert on such issues as sea law and aircraft hijacking, becomes ambassador to Austria and permanent representative to the United Nations Industrial Development Organization and the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Seattle Third In Containers

SEATTLE (AP) — This city has moved to the No. 3 position as a container port in the U.S. and sixth in the world, according to rankings released by the "'Containerization International Yearbook," a London publication.

Nationwide, Seattle ranks behind New York and Oakland, Calif., with a comfortable lead over Baltimore, Md., and Los Angeles. Internationally, Seattle sits behind London and ahead of such trading ports as Belfast, Yokohama and Antwerp.

OLD TIRES TESTED FOR BUILDING ROADS

REGINA (CP) — The provincial highways department is conducting a study to determine the value of using discarded rubber tires in highway construction, spokesman Bill Culley of the department said.

Full-scale field tests will be initiated by next June involving about one mile of pavement.

Some American states, including Arizona, already are using ground-up tires in tests, but the extreme temperature changes here, ranging from about 50 below in the winter to about 100 above in the summer, could create problems.

"The environment here kills several good ideas."

If effective, the plan could help avert cracking in asphalt, he said. Discarded auto, truck and tractor tires would be mixed with components of asphalt to as much as 30 per cent.

BIGGER ENVELOPES NEEDED AFTER OCT. 1

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office is advising mailers that after Oct. 1, 1973, the minimum acceptable size for envelopes destined for other countries will be five inches by 3½ inches.

The changes have been brought about as post offices in many countries mechanize their mail processing systems.

Until Oct. 1, items in envelopes with a minimum size of four inches by 2¾ inches will be acceptable.

Prices Stay Lower In TSE Trading

Prices at Toronto remained lower in moderate mid-afternoon trading today.

Bank, industrial mining, chemical and merchandising stocks were among sectors of the market recording declines while construction and material, oil refining, real estate and utility issues were higher.

Falconbridge Nickel fell 1⅛ to $74⅞, Royal Bank ⅝ to $34, Noranda ⅝ to $53⅝, White Pass and Yukon ½ to $11¾ and Travelways ½ to $5¼.

Walker-Gooderham rose ⅞ to $53, Banister ¾ to $22⅜, Na-Churs ⅝ to $7⅛, Cominco ½ to $31¾ and Bell Canada ¼ to $42⅛.

Falconbridge Copper lost ½ to $13¼, Mindamar Energy 35 cents to $4.95 and Bethlehem ¼ to $16. Mattagami gained ⅝ to $34½ and Tara ⅜ to $15¾.

Pennant-Puma was off 30 cents to $2.90 and Chieftain 20 cents to $9.75. Canadian Superior was up ⅞ to $52.

New York

Prices slid lower in moderate trading at New York and brokers said it reflected investor uncertainties.

Analysts attributed the declines to renewed weakness of the dollar abroad after a strong showing in the first three days of the business week, as well as to President Nixon's illness linked to economic uncertainties.

United aircraft, down 1½ at 28¼, was the New York Stock Exchange's volume leader, followed by U.S. Leasing, down ⅝ at 16¾; Texaco, down ⅜ at 31⅝; American Telephone, down ¼ at 51⅝; and Exxon down 1 at 93⅞.

Just as the three-day rally which ended Wednesday reflected a wide-spectrum of stocks, today's lower prices also were broad-based.

Hudson General, down ⅜ at 2¾, was the American Stock Exchange volume leader.

The NYSE broad-based index of some 1,500 common stocks was down 0.42 at 55.38. The Amex price-change index was down .01 at 22.64.

Montreal

Prices were mixed in light trading at Montreal.

On the Montreal Stock Exchange, Walker-Gooderham and Worts gained 1 to $52¾, Union Oil ⅜ to $15¼ and Trans-Canada Pipe Lines ⅝ to $32½ while Reader's Digest declined 1¼ to $20 and Canadian National Bank ½ to $16½.

On the Canadian Stock Exchange, Dominion Leaseholds rose four cents to eight cent on 59,500 shares trades.

London

Prices at London were higher in light trading.

Observers said leading industrial issues firmed following release of figures showng a narrower trade deficit in June.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrial stocks closed at 437.1, up 3.1.

Canadian issues were generally mixed.

Buses Win Battle of Curb

Victoria city council backed down Thursday in its effort to rid the harbor side of the Causeway to doubledecker buses.

No traffic order will be issued to give legal status to No Parking signs put up there last week — right where the government-owned London Omnibus Tourist have two parking spaces.

After the signs went up, Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer called the city's bluff by telling LOT drivers to ignore them.

Council split narrowly in deciding not to issue the order. Aldermen Sam Bawlf, Alf Hood, Clyde Savage and Mike Young were in favor of making the buses move; aldermen Malcolm Anderson, Tom Chris tie, Percy Frampton and Bill Tindall said they should stay.

Mayor Peter Pollen cast the deciding vote to take away the signs, but not before he chastized the minister for attempting to ignore traffic laws, the government for buying the tour line and the city for allowing any of the buses on the Causeway.

Of Lorimer's decision, Pollen said: "It is an incredible action by a minister, particularly in view of the outstanding relations we have had wth the government."

Of Vic Parker, provincial transit director who presumably recommended the purchase of LOT, Pollen said: "This young director of transit was hired to direct transit not to direct a series of carnivals."

Of the buses parked in front of The Empress, Pollen said: "I am constantly overwhelmed that we should use for bus storage a street that is among the most beautiful and expensive pieces of geography anywhere.,"

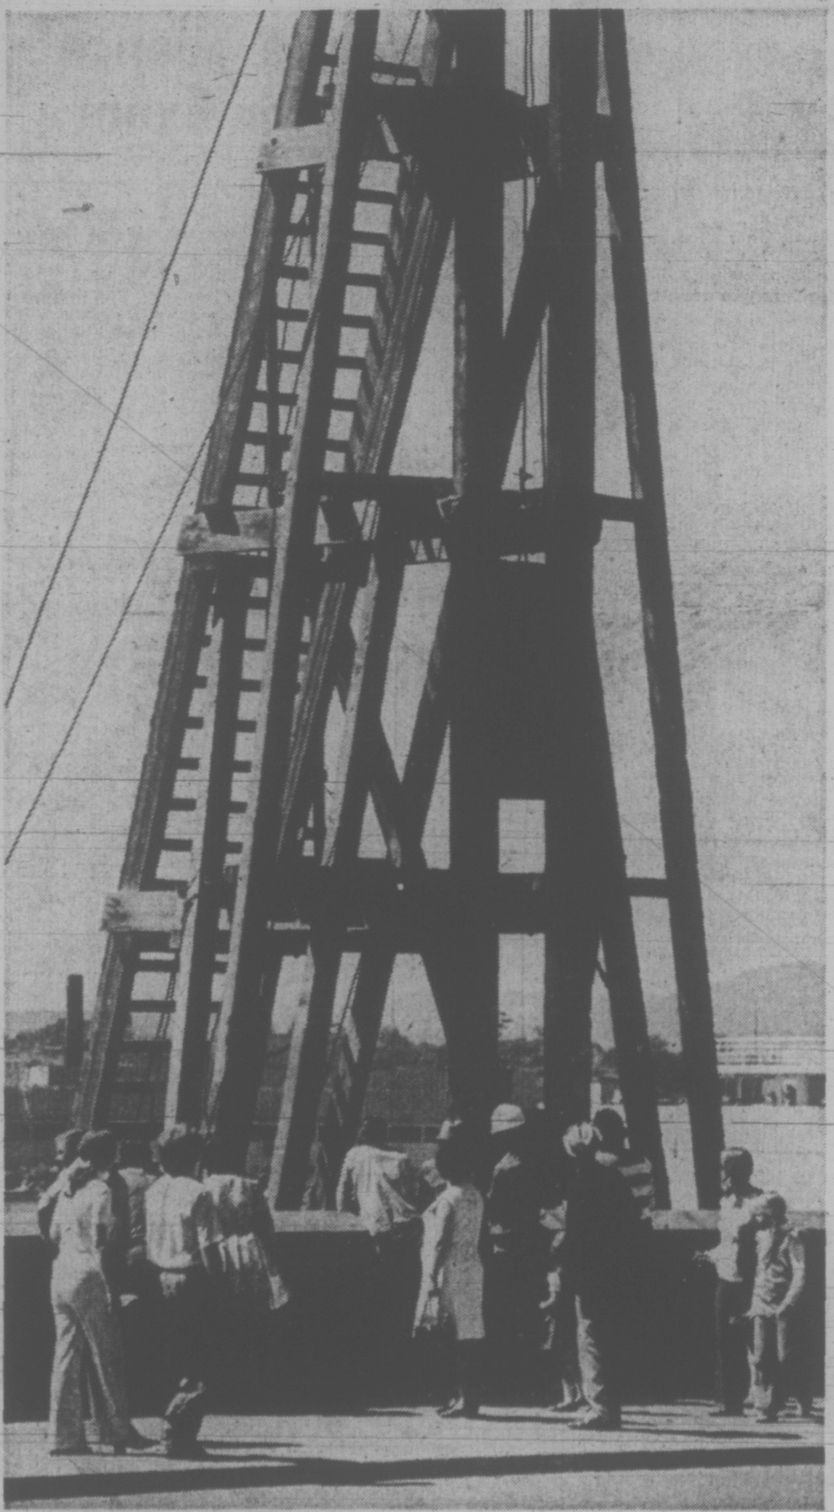
198 Join Scramble For 40 Choice Lots



PILE-DRIVING is the latest project of Victoria's sidewalk superintendents and they gather daily at the Causeway. The piles are the first step in building a pedestrain promenade around the Inner Harbor. The project should be finished in October. (John McKay photo)

The city of Victoria has received 198 bids to purchase 40 lots of prime residential property in the northeast corner of the city.

"It will take at least a week or two weeks before we can make a recommendation on who gets what," said land commissioner A. G. Joyce.

He estimates that when all the bids are sorted out, the recommendations to council are made, and the purchases arranged, the city will be about $500,000 richer.

Bids varied from $3,500 to $17,000 a lot and many of the bids were for more than one lot, Joyce said.

Bidding closed July 10.

Located on the city-side of the Saanich municipal border, the subdivision is bounded by Cook, Tolmie and Finlayson. It is 10 minutes from downtown and overlooks the Cedar Hill golf course.

The area is zoned for single-family homes and, in order to assure higher quality development, the city has applied the same minimum floor space requirements — 1,400 square feet for a bungalow and 2,000 square feet for a two-storey home — that are required in the Rockland areas.

All lots have sewers, storm drain and water main laterals already installed.

The land, which was acquired by the city many years ago for taxes, was assembled under a plan begun two years ago. The land assembly cost $157,000 of which $76,000 was contributed by the federal government.

WOMAN BADLY HURT

A woman is in critical condition at Victoria General Hospital, suffering from head injuries, following a head-on crash on Metchosin Road late Thursday night.

Another person travelling in the car is in fair condition with back injuries.

Three other passengers were discharged after being treated.

Colwood RCMP said a car driven by Ronald Legere, 19, of Work Point Barracks, was in collison with their car.

The names of the five have not been released, pending notification of next of kin.

A passenger in Legere's car, Dave Smith, 18, of 625 Bryden Court, suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Police said both cars involved in the crash were wrecked, and estimated a total of more than $2,000 damage.

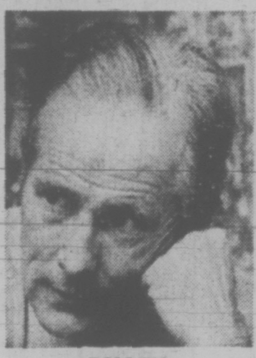
Curtain Rises Early On Play for Royal

Mayor Peter Pollen winced at Thursday's city council meeting when the hush-hush ceiling price for the Royal Theatre — $250,000 — came out in public with the reading of some routine correspondence.

"It's supposed to be secret," said the mayor who is leading the negotiations on behalf of the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee to buy the theatre from Famous Players Development Ltd.

The letter was a simple memo from the committee reporting a motion to proceed with the bargaining.

The proposal to buy the theatre — as a home for the Victoria Symphony and for public theatrical and musical events — was questioned by Ald. Sam Bawlf and Ald. Malcolm Anderson.



POLLEN
. . ."supposed to be secret."

Bawlf wondered if a feasibility study had been done and if consideration has been given to "the operation structure."

Pollen replied that the 50-year-old building had been structurally examined and found sound. He thought the operation might be handled under contract by the city. The title of the building, if bought by the intermunicipal committee, would probably be vested in the regional district, he said.

Anderson wondered about the "long term needs for a conference hall."

Pollen said "it is quite clear" that a convention-cultural centre "is two years away at least."

Ald. Mike Young defended the purchase saying "if you take the acquisition of the land itself, it's not a bad investment."

Council voted unanimously to endorse continued negotiations.

Ask the Times

Q. We have a Siamese cat who will be 19 in August. Could you please tell me if this is some kind of record?—T.S.

A. Although this is a ripe old age for a cat it's not quite a record. The Siamese cat who travelled with Miles and Beryl Smeeton, when they sailed their famous roundings of Cape Horn, was 21 when he died. He survived all his ocean voyaging, dying of an infection on the game farm which the Smeetons now run in the Alberta foothills. The granddaddy of all cats, however, was Puss, who belonged to a Mrs. T. Holway who lived in North Devon, England. Puss was 36 when he died Nov. 5, 1939.

Q. I'm always intrigued when I hear people say "God bless you" after somebody sneezes. Can you tell me how this custom originated?—G.D.

A. There appears to be no written record of how this custom began but it is said it started in the old days when people on their death bead made their last dying rattle. As they did, their family and friends looking on would give them a last "God bless you" salute.

Q. I have been told that putting red food coloring into the syrup fed to hummingbirds will cause them to be sterile. Is this true?

A. No.

EX-MINISTER TRIES COURTS FOR UIC CLAIM

Waldo Skillings, former Socred cabinet minister, has taken the federal government to court over its ruling that he cannot collect unemployment insurance.

The 66-year-old former Victoria MLA and trade minister says he paid unemployment insurance premiums during his last 37 weeks in office and then "became unemployed through no fault of my own."

He was defeated in the Aug. 30 provincial elections after 12 years in office.

The federal government has ruled that Skilling's $30,000 a year position as cabinet minister is not insurable and refused to pay the $107 a week he might otherwise have received in benefits.

Skillings, who has an income from investments and a provincial government pension, took the case to court this week where Federal Court Judge Frank Collier reserved decision.

A UIC spokesman said today all the Socred cabinet ministers began paying unemployment insurance premiums in January, 1972, when government employees became eligible for the scheme.

★

"Their employer was in error," the spokesman said.

Since then the government has been notified not to make deductions for the current cabinet ministers, he said, and the former ministers have been allowed a refund of their premiums or a rebate on their income tax payments.

Three other Socred ministers apparently applied for benefits but did not pursue the issue when the national revenue and taxation department ruled against them.

Skillings, who was an insurance agent for 25 years before entering the cabinet, is eligible for a third income from the Canada pension plan but has not yet applied for it.

UIC benefits can be collected provided the recepient is under 70 years of age and has not accepted the Canada pension.

The former minister has registered with Canada Manpower for work, as required by UIC regulations, and is looking for work in management and sales.

Skillings was not available for comment.

Safety Aids Were Lacking: Pilot

The government-recommended passage around Haddington Island near Alert Bay is unsafe for a ship the size of the freighter Irish Stardust, a marine pilot told provincial court today.

The passage lacked navigational aids, the turns were sharp and the winds and tides hit the ship broadside.

That was part of the testimony given today in court by Capt. A. D. Jones, one of the B.C. pilots on the Irish Stardust when she grounded on Haddington Island late Jan. 24.

The ship is charged with discharging 200 tons of oil, or an oily mixture into the waters of Broughton Strait as a result of the grounding.

Capt. Jones, a registered B.C. pilot since last September, was the first witness called today by defence lawyer Donovan Lowry. Lowry is expected to call at least two more witnesses later today.

Jones testified he had intended to take the Irish Stardust around the other side of the island due to what he considered unsafe conditions in the government-recommended passage. But a radio call from another ship on his projected course made him

"I couldn't tell exactly how much she was setting towards the Island because it was so black out," Jones said.

"I was really concerned about the blackness of the night."

The only thing Jones could see outside the ship was one navigational light on the west side of the island. A new tricolor light has been installed on the island since the Stardust ran aground, he said.

Jones and five other crew members were in the wheelhouse when the ship grounded. There was no loud bang or crash when the ship hit and the Stardust did not stop. It did, however, lift to the right side approximately 15 degrees.

Jones said he ordered the engine stopped and had the ship's master, Capt. James Caird, called from his room where he was sleeping.

He said the stern of the ship was slipping towards the beach again after the Stardust got off the rocks. Jones kept the ship's speed at eight knots, half-speed, because of the strong tides in the area.

The grounding was not the fault of the ship, her crew, or the master, Jones said.

The maximum fine on the charge is $100,000.

Caird was found guilty in May of not reporting an oil spill to the pollution prevention officer in Nanaimo.

His sentence will be handed down by Ostler after the ship's trial is finished.

Grants in Lieu of Taxes

Provincial government grants in lieu of taxes to municipalities were made official today with release of a cabinet order-in-council passed Thursday.

The City of Victoria gets $305,944.43 from the government under the grant system, which the province pays a rate of 15 mills on 100 per cent of the assessed value of provincial government land in each municipality and 75 per cent of the improvements on the land.

Under the scheme, Saanich gets $62,224, while Esquimalt and Oak Bay get no money.

The grants in lieu of taxes are taken for granted by each municipality when it draws up its annual budget. For example, the City of Victoria budgetted for a provincial government grant of $306,000 this year, said city comptroller Mason Sheldrick.

The total amount of money paid out this year by the province in grants in lieu of taxes is $1,232,738.42.

From Gov't $250,000 For Museum

A special spending warrant of $25,000 has been passed by the provincial government for display projects at the Provincial Museum.

The warrant was made public in cabinet orders released today.

The provincial museum was allocated a budget of $1,057,254 in spending estimates passed by the legislature this spring.

A new Indian display is one area where the money will be spent, Deputy Provincial Secretary Laurie Wallace said today.

ARCTIC CRASH SUIT

EDMONTON (CP) — A statement of claim for general damages was filed in Alberta Supreme Court Thursday against an Edmonton airline and Marten Hartwell, pilot and lone survivor of a controversial Arctic plane crash.

The statement was filed by the estate of British nurse Judy Hill, one of the passengers killed in the crash of a twin-engine Beechcraft 18 piloted by Hartwell. It lists 12 examples of alleged negligence against Gateway Aviation, Hartwell's employer, and the pilot.

The statement alleges the crash would not have occurred if the defendants had exercised proper care in the maintenance, operation and navigation of the aircraft.

Edmonton lawyer Philip Ketchum, solicitor for the nurse's estate, said the claim is for loss of expectation of life and amenities of life.

The Toronto Sun and CHQT Edmonton said in a copyright story that Toronto lawyer Jim Karswick has been instructed by the Eskimo Brotherhood to "proceed with action in a court of the Northwest Territories for compensation for the lives of Mrs. Neemee Nulliayok and David Kootook . . ." who also died.

Tentative Accord In Fishing Strike

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Tentative agreement was reached at noon today on new salmon prices for 3,500 union fishermen on the British Columbia coast.

Negotiations were continuing early this afternoon between the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Fisheries Association of B.C. over 3,000 shoreworkers and 500 tendermen and both sides were reported very close to a tentative contract settlement for these two groups.

Hope was being expressed that fishing could resume on the weekend.

First word of a break in the week-long industry strike came from Ken Campbell, manager of the fisheries association, the bargaining agency for 14 companies.

He said the UFAWU fishermen will be voting on the latest salmon price offer and he said the union is recommending acceptance.

"We made some adjustments on pinks and chums and the welfare plan," he said.

Sockeye and coho price offers remained the same as before, he added. This was 50 cents a pound this year for sockeye and 52 cents next year (the union was asking 52 cents and 57 cents) and 40 cents and 42 cents for Coho, where the union was seeking 47 and 51 cents.

"We're hopeful that we can get it all settled and fishing can resume Sunday night, said Campbell.

Both sides had bargained late into Thursday evening and then again this morning in Vancouver following a 58 per cent rejection by fishermen of the last salmon price offer, which had been described as final by the association.

In the shoreworkers dispute, it was understood that the issue of the flexible weekend had been settled and that the association had offered a further 10 cents an hour to the $1.10 offer made earlier, which was rejected by union members.

The UFAWU, in an early afternoon statement, confirmed it is recommending acceptance of the fishermen's tentative agreement. It said the new gains over the association's last position are not major ones but it did not believe "it could extract any more."

However, the union said even if fishermen accept the proposed agreement, no agreements will be signed and the strike will remain in effect until the storeworkers and tendermen's strikes are settled. Members were advised to hold all boats in port until an announcement by the central strike and policy committee.

In addition, the union said no travelling time towards fishing grounds will be allowed until all three strikes are settled, at which time there will be 24 hours allowed to travel before any salmon net fishing begins.

Fishermen members are to vote not later than 9:30 p.m. Saturday and report to union headquarters the results of the vote not later than 11 p.m. Saturday.

The latest proposal includes an extra cent per pound beyond the last offer on pinks in 1974 and half a cent on chums caught in most areas in 1973 and 1974 and some improvements in the salmon welfare fund and workmen's compensation.

Young Have Faith In Future

By JACK SCOTT, Times Staff
(Last of a Series)

TOKYO — I'd shared a concern for the future of Japan with most of the leading Japanese I'd interviewed, but the dinner with the students, two days before my departure for home, changed all that.

I'd asked my guide to invite two or three graduating students from any of the 85 universities in Tokyo. With typical Japanese over-efficiency, he brought along seven. It didn't matter. It only made me surer that the future of Japan is not nearly as bleak as their more apprehensive elders would have you believe.

My notes hardly matter, either, except possibly for the remark of one of the three pretty girls in the party who told me very firmly, "No, sir, we're not losing our identity. We are living more like you westerners every day because that's the better way to live. But we are thinking more like Japanese every day because, for us, that's the better way to think."

I found them conservative, confident, even a little cocky in a cool sort of way.

All seven of them, it turned out, were being wooed by major companies who seek the brightest young people as executive potential. In labor-short Japan some firms recruit promising youngsters by offering them trips abroad and training courses at seaside resorts that include Zen meditation, conversational English, the writing of Haiku and instruction in the tea ceremony.

"Render service to your country and your society," one company urges in a brochure for students. "Manufacture glass!"

Katsuji Kawamata, the old lion president of the Nissan Motor Co., perhaps using a western adviser's phrase, had said earlier, "We do everything but the proverbial soft shoe to attract and keep good minds."

Except that they excelled in English, my dinner guests were not hand-picked for their views. They're typical of the 1,750,000 students in 900 Japanese universities who are getting a higher education. Fewer than two per cent are activists in any way, though it might seem a larger number to the guards at the U.S. embassy in downtown Tokyo. Marijuana smokers or —heaven forbid!—users of hard drugs are all but unknown. The long-haired hippie type is so rare that the Japanese haven't yet invented a word for them. There is such a close family feeling that few young men or women leave home until they're married.

These students, like most of the other three-and-a-half million in the educational pipeline, will invest in a briefcase or cover-alls the moment their schooling is finished to go directly into a business or a factory where, chances are, they'll remain for life. They have absolute faith in their future.

While the pundits in the mass-circulation dailies retail doom and gloom over the political future my guests readily admitted only apathy and indifference. They seemed interested solely in taking their place in a stable, affluent and expanding economy. In a society where a baby is born every 16 seconds (and an adult dies every 46 seconds) they represent a new generation that has no fears about what lies ahead.

It's hard to fault them for their boredom with politics. What passes here for a "political crisis" is, it turns out, largely a matter of the lead-

Canadian Content Ads Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Juneau announced Thursday that the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) is seeking regulations that would, in effect, ban foreign commercials from Canadian airwaves.

At a meeting of the Senate transport and communications committee, Juneau said the CRTC feels that regulations governing commercials are necessary. He is CRTC chairman.

He said the regulations will call for 100 per cent Canadian production of radio commercials, and Canadian content in television advertising will be "as close to 100 per cent as possible."

The Senate committee was considering a motion by Senator Sydney Buckwold (L—Saskatchewan) to ban foreign advertising in broadcasting.

Juneau said the regulation will be modelled on those now covering programming. Television and radio program content must be at least 60 per cent Canadian over a set period and never less than 50 per cent during any part of that period.

Jail Terms 'Illegal'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hundreds of young people now jailed in British Columbia for federal offences may be serving illegal sentences as a result of a far-reaching decision Thursday by the B.C. Court of Appeal which held that a vital portion of the federal prisons act is unconstitutional.

In a 2-1 decision that could also affect similar cases in Ontario, the appeal court held that section 150 of the Prison and Reformatories Act, which provides for an indefinite sentence along with a definite one, was inoperative in B.C. because it denied an accused equality before the law and contravened the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Crown Counsel George Murray said he has been instructed to appeal the decision to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The prisons act is in effect in only B.C. and Ontario and is designed to make it possible for a judge, at his own discretion, to give persons under 22 years of age an indefinite sentence along with a definite one following conviction of a federal offence.

The act is designed for rehabilitation purposes and puts the onus on the offender, by his own behavior in jail, to determine largely how much of the indefinite term he serves after completing the definite portion.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz and Mr. Justice A. E. Branca allowed the appeal of Patrick Dale Burnshine, 17, who was sentenced to three months definite and two years less a day indefinite last Dec. 19 following conviction in county court in Vancouver of creating a disturbance.

Vancouver lawyer D. J. Sorochan, representing Burnshine, told the court the potential total of the definite and indefinite sentence amount to 27 months. Had his client been charged for the same offence under the Criminal Code of Canada, the maximum sentence the court could have imposed was six months definite plus a possible fine.

He argued successfully that the county court judge had no jurisdiction to impose the definite and indefinite sentence because the prisons act contravened the Canadian Bill of Rights in that, had his client been charged in any one of the eight Canadian provinces other than B.C. or Ontario, he would have received the lesser sentence allowable under the Criminal Code, which does not provide for indeterminate sentences in such cases.

The appeal was fought entirely on constitutional grounds with Mr. Justice Branca and Mr. Justice Ne-

NIXON ILL

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon is in hospital suffering what White House doctors have diagnosed as viral pneumonia.

He is expected to remain "at least a week," Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said, but "will carry on his necessary work."

The 60-year-old president was reported ill and entered Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland Thursday night, after carrying on a day-long schedule despite reported discomfort.

White House physician Dr. Walter Tkach said he foresees "no complications," and that "rest and recuperation are the primary treatment."

DATSUN PLANT CONSIDERED FOR SEATTLE

SEATTLE (AP) — The Japanese car firm Nissan is considering Seattle as a site for a basic automobile assembly plant, John Anderson, a spokesman for Seattle-King County Economic Development Council said Thursday.

Last fall the company announced plans for a Datsun plant in B.C. but by December said there would be indefinite delay and possibly no plant at all.

Final decision on the Seattle plant is expected within the year. Anderson said a number of Japanese companies are looking at the U.S. as a place for plants because of the devalued dollar.

CZ Earnings Increase 137%

VANCOUVER CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. Thursday reported a 27 per cent increase in sales and a 137 per cent increase in net earnings for the first six months of 1973.

Sales for the period totalled $144.7 million, up from $113.5 million for the January-June period of 1972. Net earnings climbed to $14 million from $5.9 million.

Earnings per share equalled $1.77, compared to 74 cents before extraordinary items a year ago.

Company President Robert Rogers said the earnings picture reflected continued strong demand for pulp, paper and wood products.

He said earnings for the full year of 1973 should exceed the best previous year by a considerable margin. Previous best for Crown Zellerbach Canada was 1964, when the company earned $15.1 million.

Pipe Clears Senate

WASHINGTON (CP) — The last major roadblock to a proposed trans-Alaska oil pipeline bill — an amendment calling for consideration of a Canadian route —was defeated today on the floor of the United States Senate.

The senators, voting mainly along east-west regional lines, defeated the measure 61 to 29.

The Senate immediately went on to consider other minor amendments, none of which was seen as a threat to the basic legislation proposed by Senator Henry Jackson (Dem.—Wash.) which comes up for a vote Tuesday.

The amendment was put forward by Senator Walter Mondale (Dem.—Minn.) who told his colleagues in a bitter floor debate preceding the vote that if Jackson's bill is passed "it will end up for years in court."

The Mondale amendment calls for a year's delay in pipeline construction to permit a study of a possible alternative line across Canada. The main Jackson bill would immediately remove restrictive right-of-way provisions in current federal law, but would leave construction of the proposed 800-mile, $3.5-billion Alaska line subject to court delay on environmental grounds.

Mondale suggested an independent study by the national Academy of Sciences to circumvent any judicial review.

Meanwhile, the U.S. state department denied there had been any effort to hold back information from congress on the Canadian government attitude toward construction of a pipeline for Alaskan oil.

Campora Steps Aside

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Hector Campora resigned today to allow new Argentine elections that appeared certain to return to power Juan Peron, ousted by a military coup in 1955.

In a nationally broadcast speech, Campora said:

I have always had very" clear in my conscience the conviction that my election was for no other reason than to restore to Gen. Peron the mandate that was taken from him unjustly."

Campora and Vice-President Vicente Solano Lima signed their resignations in the Pink House, the official palace. Both houses of Congress were to approve them later today.

The dramatic move followed a sudden call from moderate union leaders that Peron resume his long-interrupted leadership. He returned from exile June 20 after Campora, his hand-picked stand-in, won elections from which Peron was disqualified.

Argentina was calm today despite bitter opposition from some leftist factions of Peronism who felt the sequence of events would bring more conservative government and weaken their stance.

Elections were expected to follow in 40 days, open to all parties but almost certain to be won by a coalition ticket of Peron and Ricardo Balbin, 68-year-old leader of Argentina's second-largest party, the Radical Civic Union.

Balbin, 68, was jailed for a year during Peron's 1946-55 dictatorship and ran second to Campora in the presidential election last March. His presence on the ticket with Peron would increase public opposition to any attempt to block the election.

Campora had been unable since his inauguration May 25 to suppress feuding among the diverse factions in the Peronist movement.

100 in Queue for Neighborhood Pubs

More than 100 applications have been made for neighborhood pubs in the province —but the Liquor Control Board needs government clarification of regulations before it can act on the requests.

Liquor board secretary Gerald Devine said today the unofficial applications—"between 100 and 200'—have been received in the form of letters from all over B.C., including Victoria.

But the main problem encountered by the board to date, Devine said, has been the lack of description from the provincial government of what a neighborhood pub will be.

"We hate to do it, but so many letters are coming in, we are having to send a form letter out—telling them their letter is on file," he said.

Legislation passed at the spring session of the legislature set up a new type of liquor licence, called a "general licence." It is defined as allowing for "the sale and consumption on the establishment of liquor by the glass and light refreshments."

At the time the legislation was introduced, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said this would be the licence category under which the popular concept of neighborhood pubs would fall. But before any further action can be taken regarding the actual letting up of such facilities, regulations outlining the rules to be followed in the operation of the facilities must be written and published by the government.

Devine said that since the B.C. Liquor Board was formally established by proclamation on July 1, regulations can be expected sometime soon. He said they will either come directly from the attorney-general's department or from the three-man liquor board which was named last month.

The form letters sent to those persons applying to the board for neighborhood pub licences say their inquiries are a little premature and advises them to wait until the regulations specify exactly what a neighborhood pub is.

In the meantime, the board continues to process routine licence applications for other types of liquor facilities, including dining lounges, lounges and public houses, Devine said.

HEALTH CHIEF GETS $33,000

The chairman of the B.C. Medical Services Commission, Geoff Stewart, has received a 27 per cent salary increase from the provincial government, boosting his annual pay to $33,000. (See also Page 11).

Stewart's former salary was $26,000 per year. The increase is retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year.

The salary hike was made public in a Cabinet order-in-council released today.
